Counselling for Anxiety Problems Diana Sanders, Frank Wills, 2002-12-20 Any cognitive therapy text which quotes from Alice in Wonderland is off to a good start and in the case of Counselling for Anxiety Problems it gets better and better This is an excellent book written by counselling psychologists aimed primarily at counselling psychologists Diana Sanders and Frank Wills are experienced cognitive therapists who through various books are performing a valuable role of building bridges between counsellors and the practice of cognitive therapists In doing so they lay to rest many of the misconceptions counsellors may have about cognitive therapy often based on an 80s version of the therapy and place particular emphasis on the central importance of therapeutic relationship in cognitive therapy as in counselling Their review and discussion of the anxiety disorders is comprehensive and contemporary as indicated by the number of references from the past five years Furthermore their clinical experience as well as their humour shines through Although primarily aimed at the counselling market it will be just as useful for therapists from a variety of backgrounds I can thoroughly recommend this book
