

Macroeconomics lectures

Lecture 1. Economic growth

Chapter 3 and 4

“it is a capital mistake to theorize before one has data. Insensibly one begins to twist facts to suit theories, instead of theories to suit facts”

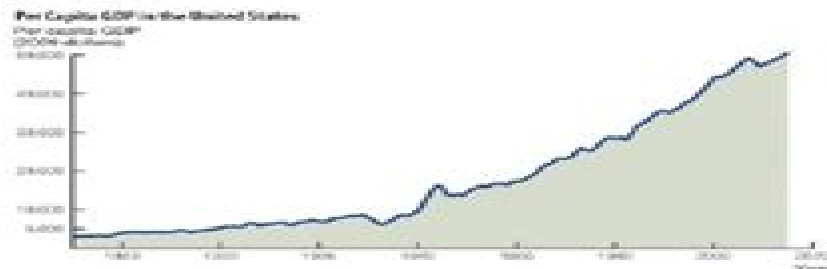

Figure 3.1

Growth over the very long run

- Sustained growth a recent phenomenon.
- From 1700 onward per-capita income has increased by a factor of almost 90 in the richest countries of the world.
- Countries have started to grow at different point in time.
- Figure 3.1 reveals large cross- country differences: per-capita GDP in Ghana about 1/15 of that of the US.
- Striking given that standards of living differed by no more than a factor of 2 or 3 prior to 1700.
- The great divergence; the emergence of large cross – country differences in living standards from 1700 onwards.
