when I felt it was a misfortune rather than a major cause of my happiness that I do conservation work in New Guinea. Yes it is true that New Guinea is a fascinating microcosm it has fascinating birds and people and it has large expanses of undisturbed rainforest. In the course of my work there helping the Indonesian government and World Wildlife Fund set up a comprehensive national park system I have been able to study animals in areas without any human population. But New Guinea has one serious drawback it has no primates except for humans. Thus I come to this conference on primate conservation as an underprivileged and emotionally deprived observer rather than as an involved participant. Nevertheless it is easy for anyone to become interested in primate conservation. The public cares about primates. More specifically to state things more realistically many people care some of the time about some primates. Primates are rivaled only by birds, pandas and the big cats in their public appeal. For some other groups of animals the best we can say is that few people care about them infrequently. For most groups of animals no one cares about them ever.

For the Wild Places Janet Trowbridge Bohlen, 1993-03. For the Wild Places profiles five of the unsung heroes of the new discipline of conservation biology the front line soldiers of the conservation movement who have dedicated their lives to saving endangered species and habitats. In addition to describing the day to day activities of the scientists author Janet Bohlen explores the wider issues that are ultimately responsible for the success or failure of conservation efforts. In the course of her travels she came to appreciate the complex interaction of local and global needs and the reality of the political and social context in which all such efforts take place. In describing the scientists their lives and their work she effectively conveys the fundamental importance and ever present challenge of a life devoted to protecting the environment.
