Canadian Economic Forecasting Mervin Daub, 1987-11-01 Daub discusses both the rationale for the practice of forecasting and the methods commonly used and traces the history of aggregate economic forecasting in Canada examining the structure conduct and performance of the present forecasting industry particularly the nature of demand and supply pricing and promotion considerations and profits and efficiency He also examines factors which influence the accuracy of forecasts and reviews the record of Canadian forecasting In the last chapters Daub considers public policy aspects of economic forecasting Should forecasters be held liable for inaccurate forecasts Should they be subject to regulation He concludes by observing that the practice of forecasting is inextricably linked to our sense of time as is the very different exercise of time keeping with clocks or watches It is socially complex highly institutionalized and informed by the many and varied visions we carry of the world Through it we attempt to organize and shape our individual and collective futures Until uncertainty is eliminated from human affairs forecasting will continue to be a necessary social practice despite recurring book upturns many established ideas regarding the economic and social history of Quebec the Canadian province that is home to the majority of its French population It places the case of Quebec into the wider question of convergence in economic history and whether proactive governments delay or halt convergence The period from 1945 to 1960 infamously labelled the Great Gloom Grande Noirceur was in fact a breaking point where the previous decades of relative decline were overturned Geloso argues that this era should be considered the Great Convergence Grand Rattrapage In opposition the Quiet Revolution that followed after 1960 did not accelerate these trends In fact there are signs of slowing down and relative decline that appear after the 1970s The author posits that the Quiet Revolution sowed the seeds for a growth slowdown by crowding out social capital and inciting rent seeking behaviour on the part of interest groups
