Maeve Brennan:

Maeve Brennan Angela Bourke,2004 Born in Dublin in 1917 to politically active parents Maeve Brennan's childhood in Ireland was moulded by the cultural ideologies of nationalism and lit by the creative energy of the Abbey and Gate theatres. She was seventeen when her father was appointed to the Irish Legation in Washington DC where he was Irish Minister throughout World War II. Maeve worked writing fashion copy at Harper's Bazaar until 1949 when William Shawn invited her to join the New Yorker. Tiny, impeccably groomed and devastatingly witty in William Maxwell's words, to be around her was to see style being invented. She wrote important fiction, criticism and Talk of the Town pieces for the New Yorker magazine throughout its most influential period in the 1950s and 60s, focusing on memory, migration and identity, her material and women's lives. As this richly researched and wide-ranging book makes clear, Maeve Brennan's effect on the people who met her, her eye for human behaviour, clothing and domestic settings, her unsparing reading of literature, her memory of home and her courageous life as a woman alone in metropolitan America make her an icon of the twentieth century. The Visitor Maeve Brennan,2001-10-15 From celebrated Irish writer Maeve Brennan, The New Yorker's Long Winded Lady comes The Visitor, the earliest of all of her known writings that tells the haunting story of a young woman who returns to her grandmother's home only to face the painful consequences of long buried family secrets. Anastasia King returns to her grandmother's house in Dublin, the very house where she grew up after six long years away. She has been in Paris, comforting her disgraced and dying mother, the runaway from a disastrous marriage to Anastasia's late father, her grandmother's only son. It's a pity she sent for you, the grandmother says, smiling with anger. And a pity you went after her. It broke your father's heart. Anastasia pays dearly for the choice she made, a choice that now costs her her own strong sense of family and makes her an exile, a visitor in the place she once called home. Found unexpectedly in a university archive, this previously unpublished novella from the 1940s is a story of Dublin and of the unkind, ungenerous, emotionally unreachable side of the Irish temper. With its sharp exploration of emotional exile and familial resentment, The Visitor deepens Brennan's legacy as a master of psychological tension and quiet devastating drama. Maeve Brennan Angela Bourke,2016-02-09 To be a staff writer at The New Yorker during its heyday of the 1950s and 1960s was to occupy one of the most coveted and influential seats in American culture. Witty, beautiful and Irish born, Maeve Brennan was lured to such a position in 1948 and proceeded to dazzle everyone who met her, both in person and on the page. From 1954 to 1981, under the pseudonym The Long Winded Lady, Brennan wrote matchless urban sketches of life in Times Square and the Village for the Talk of the Town column, and under her own name published fierce, intimate fiction tales of childhood, marriage, exile, longing and the unforgiving side of the Irish temper. Yet even with her elegance and brilliance, Brennan's rise to genius was as extreme as her collapse at the time of her death in 1993. Maeve Brennan had not published a word since the 1970s and had slowly slipped into madness, ending up homeless on the same streets of Manhattan that had built her career. It is Angela Bourke's achievement with

Maeve Brennan Homesick at The New Yorker to bring much deserved attention to Brennan's complex legacy in all her triumph and tragedy from Dublin childhood to Manhattan glamour and from extraordinary literary achievement to tragic destitution. With this definitive biography of this troubled genius it is clear that Brennan though always an outsider in her own life and times is rightfully recognized as one of the best writers to ever grace the pages of The New Yorker. The Long-Winded Lady Maeve Brennan, 2015-04-15 From 1954 to 1981 Maeve Brennan wrote for The New Yorker's Talk of the Town department under the pen name The Long Winded Lady. Her unforgettable sketches, prose snapshots of life in small restaurants, cheap hotels and crowded streets of Times Square and the Village together form a timeless bittersweet tribute to what she called the most reckless, most ambitious, most confused, most comical, the saddest and coldest and most human of cities. First published in 1969, The Long Winded Lady is a celebration of one of The New Yorker's finest writers. Maeve Brennan Angela Bourke, 2011-04-19 Born in Dublin in 1917 to politically active parents, Maeve Brennan's childhood in Ireland was moulded by the cultural ideologies of nationalism and lit by the creative energy of the Abbey and Gate theatres. She was seventeen when her father was appointed to the Irish Legation in Washington DC where he was Irish Minister throughout World War II. Maeve wrote fashion copy at Harper's Bazaar until 1949 when William Shawn invited her to join The New Yorker. Tiny, impeccably groomed and devastatingly witty in William Maxwell's words, to be around her was to see style being invented. Her richly textured fiction, criticism and Talk of the Town pieces published in the 1950s and 60s during The New Yorker's most influential period offer unsparing portraits of the Ireland she had left and the America she inhabited. As this richly researched and wide-ranging book makes clear, Maeve Brennan's effect on the people who met her, her eye for human behaviour, clothing and domestic settings, her memory of home and her courageous life as a woman alone in metropolitan America make her an icon of the twentieth century. The Rose Garden Maeve Brennan, 2015-04-15 A literary event, twenty short stories by the late Maeve Brennan, one of The New Yorker's most admired writers. Five are set in the author's native Dublin, a city like Joyce's of paralyzed souls and unexpressed love; the others are set in and around her adopted Manhattan which she once called the capsized city, half capsized anyway, with the inhabitants hanging on, most of them still able to laugh as they cling to the island that is their life's predicament. Some of the stories are quietly tender, some ferociously satirical, some unique in their chilly emotional weather. All are Maeve Brennan at her incomparable best. The Springs of Affection Maeve Brennan, 2009-03-10 The twenty-one stories collected here, the very best stories of one of The New Yorker's most celebrated writers, trace the patterns of love within three Dublin families. Love between husband and wife which begins in courtship and laughter loses all power of expression and then vanishes forever. The natural love of sister for brother and of mother for son is twisted into the rage to possess. And love that gives rise to the rituals of family life, those ordinary customs that are the only true realities most of us ever know, grows solid as rock that will never give way. In his introduction, William Maxwell, who was for twenty years Maeve Brennan's editor, writes of the special quality of her work and especially of the title story which he places among the great short fiction of the twentieth century
