América del Norte Nicolás Medina Mora,2024-05-07 Moving between New York City Mexico City and Iowa City a young member of the Mexican elite sees his life splinter in a centuries spanning debut that blends the Latin American traditions of Roberto Bolaño and Fernanda Melchor with the autofiction of US writers like Ben Lerner and Teju Cole Sebastián lived a childhood of privilege in Mexico City Now in his twenties he has a degree from Yale an American girlfriend and a slot in the University of Iowa's MFA program But Sebastián's life is shaken by the Trump administration's restrictions on immigrants his mother's terminal cancer the cracks in his relationship and his father's forced resignation at the hands of Mexico's new president As he struggles through the Trump and López Obrador years Sebastián must confront his father's role in the Mexican drug war and navigate his whiteness in Mexican contexts even as he is often perceived as a person of color in the US As he does so the novel moves through centuries of Mexican literary history from the 17th century letters of a peevishly polymathic Spanish colonizer to the contemporary packaging of Mexican writers for a US audience Split between the US and Mexico this stunning debut explores whiteness power immigration and the history of Mexican literature to wrestle with the contradictory relationship between two countries bound by geography and torn apart by politics Apparitions in Late

Medieval and Renaissance Spain William A. Christian,2022-03-08 The description for this book Apparitions in Late Medieval and Renaissance Spain will be forthcoming Gravyland Stephen Parks,2010-03-26 In Gravyland Parks chronicles the history of an urban university writing program and its attempt to develop politically progressive literacy partnerships with the surrounding community while having to work within and against a traditional educational and cultural landscape He details the experience of Temple University's New City Writing program from its beginning as a small institute with one program at a local public school to a multifaceted organization supported by large multiyear grants and establishing partnerships across the diverse neighborhoods of Philadelphia The author describes classrooms where the community takes a seat and becomes part of the conversation a conversation that readers of Gravyland share through the inclusion of a selection of passages produced by community writers published by New City Community Press While Parks celebrates classroom success in generating knowledge through dialogue with the larger community he also highlights many of the obstacles the organizers of the New City Writing program faced The author shows that writing alliances between universities and communities are possible but they must take into account the institutional economic and political pressures that accompany such partnerships Blending the theoretical and practical lessons learned Parks elucidates New City Writing s effort to offer a new model of education one in which the voice of the professor must share space with the voices of the community and one in which students come to understand that the right to sit in a classroom is the result not just of nationalist war but of peaceful civil disobedience of community struggles to gain self recognition and of collective efforts to seek social justice
