International Trade surveys the literature on the politics of international trade and highlights the most exciting recent scholarly developments. It examines the impact of domestic societal actors, domestic institutions and international interactions on trade policy and trade flows as well as building on this basic analytical framework. Including contributions from prominent scholars around the globe and from multiple theoretical and methodological traditions, the volume considers the development of concepts and policies about international trade, the influence of individuals, firms and societies, the role of domestic and international institutions and the interaction of trade and other issues such as monetary policy, environmental challenges and human rights. Showcasing both established theories and findings and cutting edge new research, the Handbook is a valuable reference for scholars of political economy. Ebook: International Economics Appleyard ; Fie, 2016-09-16 Ebook International Economics Trade Liberalisation and Poverty Minh Son Le, Tarlok Singh, Duc-Tho Nguyen, 2015-08-11. This book uses Alan Winters' analytical framework to investigate the effects of trade liberalisation on economic growth and poverty in Vietnam. The country launched a programme of economic and trade reforms known as Doi Moi in the mid 1980s which placed the economy on a transitional path from central planning to a market economy. Since then Vietnam has attained a number of remarkable achievements in terms of economic growth and poverty reduction. Although some formidable problems such as inequality and inflation remain, it is apparent that trade liberalisation has been associated with a big reduction in poverty. The analysis in the book focuses on the microeconomic household level and there is an emphasis on tracing the effects of trade liberalisation through the four separate channels identified by Winters. Such in-depth and micro-level analyses yield new insights that support important policy lessons and recommendations for Vietnam in particular and more generally for similar developing countries.

Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe's Transition Economies Kym Anderson, Johan Swinnen, 2008-06-05. The vast majority of the world's poorest households depend on farming for their livelihood. During the 1960s and 1970s most developing countries imposed pro-urban and anti-agricultural policies while many high-income countries restricted agricultural imports and subsidized their farmers. Both sets of policies inhibited economic growth and poverty alleviation in developing countries. Although progress has been made over the past two decades to reduce those policy biases, many trade and welfare-reducing price distortions remain between agriculture and other sectors as well as within the agricultural sector of both rich and poor countries. Comprehensive empirical studies of the disarray in world agricultural markets first appeared approximately 20 years ago. Since then the OECD has provided estimates each year of market distortions in high-income countries but there has been no comparable estimates for the world's developing countries. This volume is the first in a series; other volumes cover Africa, Asia and Latin America that not only fill that void for recent years but extend the estimates in a consistent and comparable way back in time and provide analytical narratives for scores of countries that shed light on the evolving nature and extent of policy interventions over the past half-century. Distortions to Agricultural Incentives in Europe's Transition Economies provides an overview of the evolution of distortions to agricultural incentives caused by price and trade policies in the economies of Eastern Europe and Central Asia that are transitioning away from central planning The book includes country and subregional studies of the ten transition economies of Central and Eastern Europe that joined the European Union in 2004 or 2007 of seven other large member countries of the Commonwealth of Independent States and of Turkey Together these countries comprise over 90 percent of the Europe and Central Asia region s population and GDP Sectoral trade and exchange rate policies in the region have changed greatly since the dissolution of the Soviet Union in 1991 but price distortions remain The new empirical indicators in these country studies provide a strong evidence based foundation for evaluating policy options in the years ahead

Rule-Makers or Rule-Takers? Jacques Pelkmans, Daniel S. Hamilton, 2015-08-24 The Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership TTIP is an effort by the United States and the European Union to reposition themselves for a world of diffuse economic power and intensified global competition It is a next generation economic negotiation that breaks the mould of traditional trade agreements At the heart of the ongoing talks is the question whether and in which areas the two major democratic actors in the global economy can address costly frictions generated by their deep commercial integration by aligning rules and other instruments The aim is to reduce duplication in various ways in areas where levels of regulatory protection are equivalent as well as to foster wide ranging regulatory cooperation and set a benchmark for high quality global norms In this volume European and American experts explain the economic context of TTIP and its geopolitical implications and then explore the challenges and consequences of US EU negotiations across numerous sensitive areas ranging from food safety and public procurement to economic and regulatory assessments of technical barriers to trade automotive chemicals energy services investor state dispute settlement mechanisms and regulatory cooperation Their insights cut through the confusion and tremendous public controversies now swirling around TTIP and help decision makers understand how the United States and the European Union can remain rule makers rather than rule takers in a globalising world in which their relative influence is waning
