

>>>How do coherent sources are produced in bi-prism arrangement ?

In a bi-prism arrangement, coherent sources are produced by splitting a beam of light into two paths using a prism. These two paths then converge at a second prism, which causes interference between the two paths. This interference produces a series of bright and dark fringes on a screen placed behind the second prism. The distance between the fringes is determined by the wavelength of the light and the distance between the two prisms. By adjusting the distance between the prisms, the spacing between the fringes can be changed. This arrangement is commonly used in interferometry, a technique used to measure small distances and surface irregularities.

>>>How do coherent sources are produced in Newton's ring arrangement ?

In Newton's ring arrangement, coherent sources are produced by placing a convex lens on a flat glass plate. The air gap between the two surfaces forms a wedge-shaped film of varying thickness. When a beam of light is incident on the lens, it gets partially reflected from both the upper and lower surfaces of the film. The reflected beams interfere with each other, producing a pattern of bright and dark rings on a screen placed above the lens. These rings are known as Newton's rings and are used in interferometry to measure the flatness of surfaces and the thickness of transparent objects.

>>>Give the construction and theory of a plane transmission grating and show how you would use it to find the wavelength of light .

A plane transmission grating is a type of diffraction grating that consists of a large number of parallel wires separated by a small distance. It can be easily constructed by drawing a large number of closely spaced lines on a plane transparent plate like glass with a sharp diamond point<sup>1</sup>.

The theory behind the use of a plane transmission grating to find the wavelength of light is based on the fact that when light passes through the grating, it is diffracted into many different directions. The angle at which the light is diffracted depends on the wavelength of the light and the spacing between the wires in the grating<sup>2</sup>.

To find the wavelength of light using a plane transmission grating, you can use a spectrometer. The spectrometer will allow you to measure the angle at which the light is diffracted by the grating. By measuring this angle and knowing the spacing between the wires in the grating, you can calculate the wavelength of light using Bragg's law<sup>3</sup>.

>>>Explain clearly what's meant by resolving power of an optical instrument according to Rayleigh's criterion .

The resolving power of an optical instrument is its ability to distinguish two closely spaced objects as separate entities. Rayleigh's criterion states that two point sources are just resolvable when the central maximum of one image is coincident with the first minimum of the other image. This is achieved when the angular separation between the two objects is equal to or greater than the angle corresponding to the first minimum of the diffraction pattern produced by a single object. The smaller the angle, the better the resolving power of the instrument. This criterion is widely used in astronomy and microscopy to determine the limit of resolution of telescopes and microscopes.

>>>What are the importance of resolving power of grating and how can it be improved?

According to <sup>4</sup>, “resolving power of grating” is its ability to form two separate maxima of two wavelengths which are very close to each other. It is defined as the ratio of the wavelength of one of the spectral line to the difference in the wavelengths between them such that the two
