Scarcity and Survival in Central America William Durham, 1979-06-01 Looking at both population and land tenure dynamics in their historical context this study challenges the view that the 1969 conflict between El Salvador and Honduras was primarily a response to population pressure The author demonstrates that land scarcity a principal cause of the war was largely a product of the concentration of landholdings The analysis focuses on the emigration of 300 000 Salvadoreans to Honduras in the years before the war inquiring into the reasons for the emigration its impact on local agricultural economies and its relation to the conflict Answers to these questions are based on a new interpretation of national statistics and on original survey research in peasant communities The author has used an interdisciplinary approach drawing on the perspectives of anthropology ecology history demography and geography In addition to its value as a case study in human ecology this book gives a clear account of the nature and origins of ecological pressures in rural Central America The book is illustrated with 21 photographs and 7 maps

Gender, Sexuality, and the Cold War Philip E. Agriculture and the Environment C.A. Edwards, M.K. Wali, D.J. Horn, F. Miller, 2012-12-02 Until the 1980s global increases in food production exceeded the concomitant growth of human populations However progressively agriculture is becoming unable to meet the world wide per capita needs for food Unless there is major international cooperation in addressing the problems associated with population control it is predicted that the global human population will reach more than 14 billion by the year 2050 with provision of adequate food fuel and space for such an increased population unachievable These problems are accentuated by factors such as world wide reductions in soil fertility the accelerating degradation of land that is suitable for food production through soil erosion the world wide trend for migration of human populations from rural habitats to cities and extremely rapid rates of global deforestation Possible solutions to global sustainability in agriculture and natural resources must involve an integration of ecological sociological cultural and economic considerations as well as mandated international and national policies This publication outlines these problems and attempts to seek solutions The United States and the Andean Republics Fredrick B. Pike, 1977 Monograph on the role of USA in the present and historical political development of the Andean region treats the rise of corporativism ie The protection of traditional culture and social structure from negative outside capitalistic influences in Peru Bolivia and Ecuador and discusses the effects of race and religion Marxism elites and the CIAP on the formation of political ideology Maps and references Quantifying Sustainable Development Charles A.S. also presents the development of cutting edge technology that links GIS and modeling approaches with extensive databases on meteorology soils agricultural production and land use The book discusses whether development is sustainable through a synthesis of demographic economic and resource specific considerations Costa Rica is uniquely suited to this study because of its size stage of development democratic institutions and national databases A CD ROM containing all data and programs color images animated models large data tables and references accompanies the book Links economic and biophysical analyses of sustainability Presents new tools and approaches for analysis and decision making Includes a CD ROM containing data and programs color images animated models and references
