co edited by Drs Amanda Spink and Charles Cole provides an understanding of the new directions leading edge theories and models in human information behavior Information behavior is conceptualized as complex human information related processes that are embedded within an individual's everyday social and life processes. The book presents chapters by an interdisciplinary range of scholars who show new directions that often challenge the established views and paradigms of information behavior studies. Beginning with an evolutionary framework, the book examines information behaviors over various epochs of human existence from the Palaeolithic Era and within pre-literate societies to contemporary behaviors by 21st-century humans. Drawing upon social and psychological science theories, the book presents a more integrated and holistic approach to the understanding of information behaviors that include multitasking and non-linear longitudinal processes, individuals' information ground, information practices, and information sharing, digital behaviors, and human information organizing behaviors. The final chapter of the book integrates these new approaches and presents an overview of the key trends, theories, and models for further research. This book is directly relevant to information scientists, librarians, social and evolutionary psychologists. Undergraduate and graduate students, academics, and information professionals interested in human information behavior will find this book of particular benefit.

Social Work Practice Eileen Gambrill, 2012-10-31. The first textbook to emphasize the importance of critical thinking skills to practice, this third edition of the classic Social Work Practice retains its unique focus on thinking critically about decisions that social workers make daily. Organized around the phases of helping, this hands-on introduction highlights the decision points that social workers encounter during assessment, intervention, and evaluation. This text, together with its companion website, provides students with a wealth of hands-on exercises for developing and assessing their practice skills. Most importantly, it helps students enhance client well-being by becoming critical thinkers and evidence-informed practitioners.

The Science of Evaluation Ray Pawson, 2013-02-01. Evaluation researchers are tasked with providing the evidence to guide programme building and to assess its outcomes. As such, they labour under the highest expectations, bringing independence and objectivity to policy making. They face huge challenges given the complexity of modern interventions and the politicised backdrop to all of their investigations. They have responded with a huge portfolio of research techniques, and through their professional associations have set up schemes to establish standards for evaluative inquiry and to accredit evaluation practitioners. A big question remains: Has this monumental effort produced a progressive, cumulative, and authoritative body of knowledge that we might think of as evaluation science? This is the question addressed by Ray Pawson in this sequel to Realistic Evaluation and Evidence-based Policy. In answer, he provides a detailed blueprint for an evaluation science based on realist principles.
