Women, Love and Learning Alison Mackinnon, 2010 This book tells the story of a generation of American and Australian women who embodied and challenged the prescriptions of their times In the 1950s and early 60s they went to colleges and universities trained for professions and developed a life of the mind They were also urged to embrace their femininity to marry young to devote themselves to husbands children and communities Could they do both While they might be seen as a privileged group they led the way for a multitude in the years ahead They were quietly making the revolution that was to come Did they have the best of all possible worlds Or were they caught in a double bind Sylvia Plath's letters tell of her delighted sense of life opening before her as a college girl Her poetry however tells of anguish of reaching for distant goals Drawing on interviews surveys reunion books letters biographical and autobiographical writing from both American and Australian women this cultural history argues that the choices that faced educated women in that time led to the revolution of the late 1960s and 70s Something had to give There are lessons here for today's young women facing again conflicting expectations Is it possible they ask to have it all

Respectable Saida Grundy, 2022-08-02 The making of a culture of Black male respectability at Morehouse that underlines conservative notions of gender and class by a former Spelman student who was once Miss Morehouse How does it feel to be groomed as the solution to a national Black male problem This is the guiding paradox of Respectable an in depth examination of graduates of Morehouse College the nation's only historically Black college for men While Black male collegians are often culturally fetishized for beating the odds the image of Black male success that Morehouse assiduously promotes and celebrates is belied by many of the realities that challenge the students on this campus Saida Grundy offers a unique insider perspective a graduate of Spelman college and a former Miss Morehouse Grundy crafts an incisive feminist and sociological account informed by her personal insights and scholarly expertise Respectable gathers the experiences of former students and others connected to Morehouse to illustrate the narrow conservative vision of masculinity molded at a competitive Black institution The thirty two men interviewed unveil a culture that forges confining ideas of respectable Black manhood within a context of relentless peer competition and sexual violence measured against unattainable archetypes of idealized racial leadership Grundy underlines the high costs of making these men the experiences of low income students who navigate class issues at Morehouse the widespread homophobia laced throughout the college's notions of Black male respectability and the crushingly conformist expectations of a college that sees itself as making good Black men As Morehouse's problems continue to pour out into national newsfeeds this book contextualizes these issues not as a defect of Black masculinity but as a critique of what happens when an institution services an imagination of what Black men should be at the expense of more fully understanding the many ways these young people

The authors investigate processes of social closure, marginalization and elite formation paying particular attention to their cultural expressions and to the legitimizing discourses of nationalist and neoliberal agendas. While individual and collective identities are inextricably linked with the consolidation of global capitalism, external blueprints are everywhere mediated through historically grounded experiences and local social relations. Comprising studies from Bulgaria, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland and Russia, the volume explores practices, stories and performances in everyday life worlds. The ethnographies show both individual and collective identities to be emergent projects constrained by economic processes and state policies but ultimately created by people themselves as they pursue their interests and search for meaning Citizen Employers Jeffrey Haydu, 2019-06-30 The exceptional weakness of the American labor movement has often been attributed to the successful resistance of American employers to unionization and collective bargaining. However, the ideology deployed against labor's efforts to organize at the grassroots level has received less attention. In Citizen Employers, Jeffrey Haydu compares the very different employer attitudes and experiences that guided labor-capital relations in two American cities, Cincinnati and San Francisco, in the period between the Civil War and World War I. His account puts these attitudes and experiences into the larger framework of capitalist class formation and businessmen's collective identities. Cincinnati and San Francisco saw dramatically different developments in businessmen's class alignments, civic identities and approach to unions. In Cincinnati, manufacturing and commercial interests joined together in a variety of civic organizations and business clubs. These organizations helped members overcome their conflicts and identify their interests with the good of the municipal community. That pervasive ideology of business citizenship provided much of the rationale for opposing unions In sharp contrast San Francisco s businessmen remained divided among themselves opted to side with white labor against the Chinese and advocated treating both unions and business organizations as legitimate units of economic and municipal governance Citizen Employers closely examines the reasons why these two bourgeoisies located in comparable cities in the same country at the same time differed so radically in their degree of unity and in their attitudes toward labor unions and how their views would ultimately converge and harden against labor by the 1920s With its nuanced depiction of civic ideology and class formation and its application of social movement theory to economic elites this book offers a new way to look at employer attitudes toward unions and collective bargaining That new approach Haydu argues is equally applicable to understanding challenges facing the American labor movement today

Privilege and Diversity in the Academy Frances A. Maher, Mary Kay Thompson Tetreault, 2013-10-18 Over the past several decades higher education has been transformed by the entry of faculty of color and women into the university system Through detailed institutional ethnographies of three very different universities Privilege and Diversity in the Academy explores how this diversification has dismantled and reconfigured relationships of privilege and diversity in higher education Authors Maher and Tetreault use examples from a top ranked private university a comprehensive urban university and a major public university to illustrate how privilege is enacted resisted and transformed as changes occur in the student bodies and faculties of these schools In their analyses they identify the institutional structures that facilitate the success of a diverse faculty and make valuable observations about patterns of institutional change and resistance
