To Look Like America Katherine C. Naff, 2018-03-05 To Look Like America is designed to contribute a unique perspective to those interested in the challenges presented to public sector organizations particularly in the federal sector by an increasingly diverse workforce Current projections are that the American workforce will become more and more diverse over the next decade forcing employers to respond to real or perceived barriers to the participation and advancement of women and minorities in their organizations This book provides a means for identifying and taking steps to dismantle such barriers It shows how empirical measures can identify the extent to which such barriers exist The measures are applied to a broad cross section of the federal civil service through the use of employment focus group and interview data as well as responses to surveys administered to representative samples of federal employees The analysis examines the consequences that result when barriers are left unaddressed and concludes with an assessment of interventions that can be effective in dismantling barriers and promoting true participation

Smith, 2015-06-01 Daryl G Smith has devoted her career to studying and fostering diversity in higher education She has witnessed and encouraged the evolution of diversity from an issue addressed sporadically on college campuses to a reality of the modern university experience In Diversity's Promise for Higher Education Smith brings together scholarly and field research relevant to the next generation of diversity work The book argues that achieving excellence in a diverse society requires increasing the institutional capacity for diversity while simultaneously working to understand how diversity is tied to better leadership positive change research in virtually every field student success accountability and more equitable hiring practices To become more relevant to society the nation and the world while remaining true to their core missions colleges and universities must continue to see diversity like technology as central not parallel to their work In Diversity's Promise for Higher Education Smith proposes a set of clear and realistic practices that will help colleges and universities locate diversity as a strategic imperative and pursue diversity efforts that are inclusive of the varied and growing issues apparent on campuses without losing focus on the critical unfinished business of the past In this edition which is aimed at administrators faculty researchers and students of higher education Smith emphasizes a transdisciplinary approach to the topic of diversity drawing on an updated list of sources from a wealth of literatures and fields The tables have been refreshed to include data on faculty diversity over a twenty year period and the

Designing for Diversity Kathryn H. Anthony, 2021-08-18 A powerful statement about the repercussions of discrimination and the benefits of diversity in architecture Providing hard data for trends that many perceive only vaguely and some deny altogether Designing for Diversity reveals a profession rife with gender and racial discrimination and examines the aspects of architectural practice that hinder or support the full participation of women and persons of color Drawing on interviews and surveys of hundreds of architects Kathryn H Anthony outlines some of the forms of discrimination that recur most frequently in architecture being offered added responsibility without a commensurate rise in position salary or credit not being allowed to engage in client contact field experience or construction supervision and being confined to certain kinds of positions typically interior design for women government work for African Americans and computer aided design for Asian American architects Anthony discusses the profession s attitude toward flexible schedules part time contracts and the demands of family and identifies strategies that have helped underrepresented individuals advance in the profession especially establishing a strong relationship with a mentor She also observes a strong tendency for underrepresented architects to leave mainstream practice either establishing their own firms going into government or corporate work or abandoning the field altogether Given the traditional mismatch between diverse consumers and predominantly white male producers of the built environment plus the shifting population balance toward communities of color Anthony contends that the architectural profession staves off true diversity at its own peril Designing for Diversity argues convincingly that improving the climate for nontraditional architects will do much to strengthen architecture as a profession Practicing architects managers of firms and educators will learn how to create conditions more welcoming to a diversity of users as well as designers of the built environment
