Out of the Bug Jar Kathleen Thomas,1985-03-01 Memoirs of the American Folk-lore Society ,1924 Math Experiences for Young Learners, Grades PK - K Whiting Woodfield,2010-06-11 Make math matter to students in grades PK K using Math Experiences for Young Learners This 64 page book provides activities and meaningful learning opportunities for students and useful information for educators It includes standards and skills information on how to create a math environment math file folder games suggested read aloud titles cross curricular activities home school connections and math explorations The book supports NAEYC and NCTM standards Deadly Decision Regina Smeltzer,2014-10-31 Bill Iver didn't expect anything more than hard work when he offered to help his daughter and son in law restore their rented historic South Carolina home but then he sees two boys in the attic and his hand passes through one of them Bill has always believed that being absent from the body meant being present with the Lord but if that is true what did he see And why does the boy dressed in 19th century clothing look familiar while the second boy dressed in jeans and sweatshirt look like the missing grandson of the house's owner What is the connection between the two boys and Bill Hesitant to share his experience with his pastor but consumed with the need to understand Bill seeks a worldly explanation which leads him down a trail of decisions that are deadly to body and soul Through the mire he must undo the consequences of his choices discover what his visions mean and uncover an age old mystery that will bring closure and reconciliation Jamaica Anansi Stories Martha Warren Beckwith,1924 The Mummy Musical Michael Tester,1996 This journey into a child's imagination begins with the question What did you do on your vacation Not one to be upstaged by her worldly classmates Shirley spins a wild tale of Egyptian adventure which utilizes rock and roll and rap to explore the amazing value of one's imagination JAMAICAN ANANSI TALES AND STORIES Anon E. Mouse,2016-12-10 THE STORIES in this collection were recorded from the lips of over sixty negro story tellers in the remote country districts of Jamaica during two visits to the island in the summer of 1919 and the winter of 1921 The role of Anansi the trickster spider is akin to the Native American Coyote and the Southern African Bantu Hare Herein you will find 149 Anansi tales and a further 18 Witticisms The stories are categorised into Animal Stories Old Stories chiefly of sorcery Dance and Song and Witticisms You will find stories as varied in title and content as The Fish Basket The Storm The King's Two Daughters The Gub Gub Peas Simon Tootoos The Tree Wife and many many more unique tales In some instances Martha Warren Beckwith was able to record musical notation to accompany the stories As such you will find these scattered throughout the book In this way the original style of the story telling which in some instances mingles story song and dance is as nearly as possible preserved Two influences have dominated story telling in Jamaica the first an absorbing interest in the magical effect of song which far surpasses that in the action of the story the second the conception of the spider Anansi as the trickster hero among a group of animal figures Anansi stories regularly form the entertainment during wake nights and it is difficult not to believe that the vividness with which these animal actors take part in the story springs from the idea that they really represent the dead in the underworld whose spirits have the power according to the native belief of taking animal form In the local culture magic songs are often used in communicating with the dead and the obeah man who sets a ghost upon an enemy often sends it in the form of some animal hence there are animals which must be carefully handled lest they be something other than they appear The importance of animal stories is further illustrated by the fact that animal stories form the greater part of this volume 33% of the net profit from the sale of this book will be donated to Sentebale a charity supporting children orphaned by AIDS in Lesotho

Webb City

Harve E. Rawson, 2001-04-04 A psychologist authored this nostalgic look at a small Ozark town Webb City Missouri from the depths of the Great Depression to the end of the Post World War II Era It is a beautiful tribute and affirmation of so called middle America and small town values and attempts to demonstrate how small interactions in a child's life make a tremendous difference The story is unique the tales are told as seen through the eyes of a perky bright rather independent red haired boy who finds out for himself the good and bad of people examines the values people use to give meaning to their lives explores the deep prejudices and hero worship that hinder their growth and most importantly discovers that most people are on your side when the going gets rough The ugliness of the Great Depression the chronic unemployment the hunger the feelings of worthlessness the poor health the absolute despair is the setting for the first part of the story as Ozarkians struggle to survive and retain human dignity in the process Neighbors help each other simply because they know they may be the next to need help employment is shared because it is dignifying self reliance is given the highest priority but schooling and learning is never neglected On the contrary it is given new importance as the way out of this mess World War II eventually effects even this remote little town in the Ozarks The unemployment crises ends but the town sacrifices its best to the Armed Services its minerals are exploited callously without environmental regard and new prejudices emerge with are damaging to all The end of the War brings much greater material prosperity but the old social order is rapidly collapsing Rigid racial segregation becomes untenable families are moving to new opportunities and technology threatens many social institutions which once seemed to serve so well Within this background the author relates those childhood experiences that shaped him as an adult Each family member each neighbor each job each institution each friend all molded his character and all taught him valuable lessons for dealing with both personal and professional life This is a collection of parables It is not an autobiography It is not a book of nostalgia It is not a history of the Depression or World War II It is not a history of Webb City It is a series of tales teaching tales that show how sometimes seemingly small incidents in a child's life can change them forever It also clearly demonstrates that we are always affecting others by what we do especially children The parables cover altruism avarice selflessness sharing sacrifice giving self centeredness devotion loyalty concern patriotism love of learning poverty poor health unemployment racial and religious prejudice insensitivity callousness religious beliefs greed and quite a few other human foibles and strengths This book part of the Tales of the Ozarks series contains material from some events of Webb City over 50 years ago including references to actual places people and events it must be read as a work of reimagined memory which is as we all know a form of fiction Certain historical facts sequencing of events peoples motives and intents and even dialogue may not be accurate A companion CD of these tales and others entitled Tales of the Ozarks will soon be available
