

Abstract

After exploring genres common to the field of physical therapy through a preliminary genre analysis, I continued analyzing the language and genres of my field by tracing case studies related to physical therapy. I gathered articles relating to the connection between physical therapists, patients, and physicians. I found case studies relating to this topic and traced the case studies and common patterns within these articles. Through my research, I have found sources claiming that physical therapists' knowledge of common illnesses and even severe diseases is crucial to the patient's health and even the physician (Coulon and Landin 2012; McClinton & Heiderscheit 2012). I have also found that many medical specialists are still looking for the most effective treatment (Reinking 2012; Shindle et al. 2012; Theiss, Fink, & Gerber 2011) These sources have helped me to identify the various aspects of this issue in relation to the field of physical therapy. In addition, these articles have helped me continue exploring the genre conventions that I will need to learn as I enter a new community through my major.
