Ocean Biogeochemistry Michael J.R. Fasham, 2003-04-08 Oceans account for 50% of the anthropogenic CO₂ released into the atmosphere During the past 15 years an international programme the Joint Global Ocean Flux Study JGOFS has been studying the ocean carbon cycle to quantify and model the biological and physical processes whereby CO₂ is pumped from the ocean s surface to the depths of the ocean where it can remain for hundreds of years This project is one of the largest multi disciplinary studies of the oceans ever carried out and this book synthesises the results It covers all aspects of the topic ranging from air sea exchange with CO₂ the role of physical mixing the uptake of CO₂ by marine algae the fluxes of carbon and nitrogen through the marine food chain to the subsequent export of carbon to the depths of the ocean Special emphasis is laid on predicting future climatic change

The United Service, 1894 Antarctic Sea Ice, 1973-1976, 1983 Data from the Electrically Scanning Microwave Radiometer ESMR on the Nimbus 5 satellite are used to determine the extent and distribution of Antarctic sea ice The characteristics of the southern ocean the mathematical formulas used to obtain quantitative sea ice concentrations the general characteristics of the seasonal sea ice growth decay cycle and regional differences and the observed seasonal growth decay cycle for individual years and interannual variations of the ice cover are discussed The sea ice data from the ESMR are presented in the form of color coded maps of the Antarctic and the southern oceans The maps show brightness temperatures and concentrations of pack ice averaged for each month 4 year monthly averages and month to month changes Graphs summarizing the results such as areas of sea ice as a function of time in the various sectors of the southern ocean are included The images demonstrate that satellite microwave data provide unique information on large scale sea ice conditions
