Support for Microenterprises Maryke Dessing, 1990 Microenterprises play an important role in sub Saharan Africa They account for a sizeable portion of the economy by providing employment and a means of livelihood for much of the nonagricultural population This paper is the result of a survey of the literature and extensive discussions with practitioners and its primary focus is a direct approach in support of microenterprises Perhaps the simplest objective to pursue is access to credit The main lesson from experimentation in this field is that the poor are bankable and can be served relatively inexpensively provided nontraditional lending methods are utilized e g group lending Technical assistance and support services can also be provided to help first time entrepreneurs set up their own businesses to assist microenterprises in their daily business or to help them graduate to a larger size The task of assisting microenterprises requires small flexible and responsive organizations with sufficient autonomy to make ad hoc decisions yet with adequate coordination at the national level Such organizations include PVOs NGOs cooperatives banks business associations churches and women s groups The report recommends that capacity building be incorporated as a specific objective of microenterprise support programs and should be budgeted for Shifting the focus of assistance from beneficiaries to support institutions is an effective way of reaching the most marginal groups

Rival States, Rival Firms John M. Stopford, Susan Strange, John S. Henley, 1991-10-17 In this theoretically original work two distinguished authors explore the mutual interdependence of states and firms throughout the world They show how global structural changes in finance technology knowledge and politics often impel governments to seek the help and cooperation of managers of multinational enterprises Yet as Professors Stopford and Strange demonstrate this is constrained by each country's economic resources its social structures and its political history Based on grass roots research into the experience of over 50 multinationals and more than 100 investment projects in three developing countries Brazil Malaysia and Kenya the authors develop a matrix of agendas They present the impact on projects of the multiple factors affecting the bargaining relationships between the government and the foreign firm at different times and in a variety of economic sectors In conclusion they offer some guidelines for actions to both governments and firms and some points to future interdisciplinary research

The World Economy Marjan Svetlicic, 1996-08-12 The process of globalization can be seen in the increase of trade interdependence the importance of global multinational corporations mobility and volatility of capital flows with dangers demonstrated by the recent Mexican crisis This globalization creates both dangers and new opportunities both winners and losers The parallel growth of regional blocs is equally hazardous particularly for countries left outside the regional blocs The book with contributions by eminent experts describes the impact of both globalization and regionalization and the relationship between these two dominant trends

Agricultural Biotechnology, 1991

The Petrochemical Industry in Developing Asia

Walter Vergara, Dominique Babelon, World Bank, 1990 The purpose of this report is to address the need for information on the petrochemical industry in Asia in view of the fast evolving situation of the industry in the region and the growing involvement of the World Bank with operations and studies in a number of Asian countries The report reviews the current trends of the industry with relevance for Asian based producers and documents the substantial increases in activity and rates of growth of the sector in Asia A substantial part of the analysis is dedicated to the assessment of competitive advantages in the production of petrochemicals by individual producers The study also reviews the policy framework in all countries selected and compares the different economic instruments and other policy tools that have been used to develop their industries The report concludes that prospects for future development of the industry in developing Asia are generally favorable As a caveat the optimistic outlook hinges on the prospects for continuous economic growth and the oil supply and pricing situation To secure their competitive position and materialize the growth prospects countries with a lower competitive posture must move to improve their economics of manufacture through feedstock diversification vertical integration restructuring increased exposure to competition and improved long term planning
