Our Nig Sketches From The Life Of A Free Black:

Our Nig, Or Sketches from the Life of a Free Black Harriet Wilson, 2013-12 First published in 1859 Our Nig is an autobiographical narrative that stands as one of the most important accounts of the life of a black woman in the antebellum North. In the story of Frado, a spirited black girl who is abused and overworked as the indentured servant to a New England family, Harriet E. Wilson tells a heartbreaking story about the resilience of the human spirit. The female child of a white female outcast and a black freeman, Harriet Wilson gives a detailed account of what it was like being raised by a white family in the pre-Civil War North of the United States, a household where she was abandoned by her mother at 3. This biography gives a general idea of what a Negro's life in the North was like and it was not much different from that life of a slave in the South. The mistress of the house was brutal beyond measure, but many of the other family members were reasonably kind, though not kind enough to put a stop to the abuse, and it makes one shudder to think of what could have happened in a family who had nothing but Negro haters in it. Still, Wilson recounts how she got a small measure of schooling and how she eventually became a Christian, something which the lady of the house, a Christian herself, opposed, and her eventual marriage. An upsetting story, it is nevertheless of much more value than Uncle Tom's Cabin as it was told from the point of view of the victim and not a sympathetic white.

Our Nig Harriet E. Wilson, 2011-12-20 With a New Introduction and Notes by Henry Louis Gates Jr and Richard J. Ellis. A fascinating fusion of two literary models of the nineteenth century, the sentimental novel and the slave narrative, Our Nig apart from its historical significance is a deeply ironic and highly readable work tracing the trials and tribulations of Frado, a mulatto girl abandoned by her white mother after the death of the child's black father, who grows up as an indentured servant to a white family in nineteenth-century Massachusetts. This definitive edition of Our Nig includes a new Introduction by Henry Louis Gates Jr and Richard J. Ellis and a set of appendices: Harriet Wilson's Career as a Spiritualist, Hattie E. Wilson in the Banner of Light and Spiritual Scientist, a collection of her extant contributions to these newspapers, Documents from Harriet Wilson's Life in Boston, and a compilation of primary source material relating to Wilson's identity. There is also a new chronology of the life of Harriet Wilson by Richard J. Ellis as well as an up-to-date Select Bibliography of current scholarship regarding Harriet Wilson. This edition gives the fullest account to date of the life of Harriet Wilson, filling out many critical points regarding her life after writing Our Nig, in particular when she became a medium who communicated with the dead and as an educator in the Spiritualist movement after the Civil War.

Our Nig Harriet E. Wilson, 2005-01-01 This seminal autobiographical tale, believed to have been the first published by an African American woman, describes the life and struggles of an orphaned mulatto. Part slave narrative and part sentimental novel, it recounts the heroine's exploitation first by her employers and later by an opportunistic husband. Essential for students of African American history and culture.

Wilson was orphaned when young and bound until the age of 18 as an indentured servant. She struggled to make a living after that, marrying twice; her only son George died at the age of seven in the poor house where she had placed him while trying to survive as a widow. She wrote one novel. Wilson later was associated with the Spiritualist church, was paid on the public lecture circuit for her lectures about her life, and worked as a housekeeper in a boarding house. Biography Born Harriet E. Hattie Adams in Milford, New Hampshire, she was the mixed-race daughter of Margaret Ann or Adams Smith, a washerwoman of Irish ancestry, and Joshua Green, an African American hooper of barrels. After her father died when Hattie was young, her mother abandoned Hattie at the farm of Nehemiah Hayward Jr., a well-to-do Milford farmer connected to the Hutchinson Family Singers. As an orphan, Adams was bound by the courts as an indentured servant to the Hayward family, a customary way for society at the time to arrange support and education for orphans. The intention was that in exchange for labor, the orphan child would be given room, board, and training in life skills so that she could later make her way in society. From their documentary research, the scholars P. Gabrielle Foreman and Reginald H. Pitts believe that the Hayward family were the basis of the Bellmont family depicted in Our Nig. This was the family who held the young Frado in indentured servitude, abusing her physically and mentally from the age of six to eighteen. Foreman and Pitts' material was incorporated in supporting sections of the 2004 edition of Our Nig. After the end of her indenture at the age of eighteen, Hattie Adams, as she was then known, worked as a house servant and a seamstress in households in southern New Hampshire and in marriage and family. Adams married Thomas Wilson in Milford on October 6, 1851. An escaped slave, Wilson had been traveling around New England giving lectures based on his life. Although he continued to lecture periodically in churches and town squares, he told Hattie that he had never been a slave and that he had created the story to gain support from abolitionists. Wilson abandoned Harriet soon after they married. Pregnant and ill, Harriet Wilson was sent to the Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, Poor Farm in Goffstown, where her only son, George Mason Wilson, was born. His probable birth date was June 15, 1852. Soon after George's birth, Wilson reappeared and took the two away from the Poor Farm. He returned to sea, where he served as a sailor, and died soon after. As a widow, Harriet Wilson returned her son George to the care of the Poor Farm, where he died at the age of seven on February 16, 1860. She could not make enough money to support them both and provide for his care while she worked. After that, Wilson moved to Boston, hoping for more work opportunities. On September 29, 1870, Wilson married again to John Gallatin Robinson in Boston. An apothecary, he was a native of Canada, born in Sherbrooke, Quebec. Robinson was of English and German ancestry; he was nearly 18 years younger than Wilson. From 1870 to 1877, they resided at 46 Carver Street, after which they appear to have separated.
