Child sexual abuse (CSA; i.e., physical or nonphysical sexual acts with a child under the age of 18 in which there is no or limited capacity to provide true consent) can occur through online exploitation, child pornography, and the luring of children offline for sexual encounters. Although CSA is likely underreported, recent studies suggest that approximately 15% of girls and 8% of boys will be victims of CSA before entering adulthood. About 75% of CSA occurs with someone the child knows – family members and trusted adults from schools, sports leagues, and faith-based organizations. Approximately 23% of CSA is peer-to-peer (e.g., children under 18).

The long-term effects of CSA are serious – survivors are more likely to have physical injuries, chronic pain, STIs, and sexual dysfunction. CSA is also associated with adverse mental health outcomes, including higher rates of depression, PTSD, suicide attempts, and substance use/misuse. Strategies to prevent and treat CSA, along with barriers and recommendations for policymakers to consider, are discussed below.

Prevention and Treatment

Successful prevention efforts engage the population at multiple levels via children, caregivers, community members, and potential offenders. The most effective approaches for CSA prevention are to: 1) educate parents, caregivers, and children about bodies and safety behavior and 2) empower children to tell an adult/resist if they feel uncomfortable or unsafe.

Please note the example programs listed below are alphabetized within subheadings and not listed in any preferential order. For more information about evidence-based programs, please refer to this resource.*

Universal prevention programs start early by targeting the entire population (e.g., all children) regardless of risk and are usually offered to children and youth in a school-based program.

- Examples of evidence-based universal prevention programs: Body Safety Training, Safe Touches, and Who Do You Tell?
 - These programs emphasize education and empowerment for children using role-play scenarios and age-appropriate teaching of body autonomy, consent, and safety, as well as how to recognize, respond to, and report inappropriate sexual behavior directed towards them, and access support to reduce the impacts of sexual violence.

Targeted prevention programs focus on children at-risk for CSA or adults who have regular contact with children (i.e., teachers, first-responders, community members).

- Examples of evidence-based programs supporting children and families: Nurse-Family Partnership (NFP), Parents as Teachers (PAT)
 - These programs focus on home visiting for pregnant mothers and young children in order to provide education about effective parenting and child development as well as health checks and community resources for support with goals of strengthening families and preventing child abuse and neglect.
- Evidence-based programs supporting caregivers and other adults working with children: Circles of Safety, Prevent It, Stewards of Children
 - These programs teach caregivers, teachers, physicians, and advocates how to effectively screen for CSA and what to do if they suspect CSA has occurred.

Treatment programs can either support survivors of CSA or support the reform and rehabilitation of offenders in order to prevent re-offenses.

- Treatment programs that target survivor's resulting trauma responses, in addition to healthy sexual behaviors, are likely to be most effective in reducing potential emotional regulation difficulties, which will therefore reduce the risk of potential forms of problematic sexual behavior as the child develops into an adult.

book offers for the first time a balanced and probing textual analysis of this pioneering scholar's writing to assess Money's profound impact on the debates and research on sexuality and gender that dominated the last half of the twentieth century. The author recovers Money's brilliance and insight from simplistic dismissals of his work due to his involvement in the tragic David Reimer case while never losing sight of his flaws. Gender, Power and the Household L. McKie, S. Bowlby, S. Gregory, 1999-05-17

The chapters in this book illustrate from a number of different perspectives the ways in which power is located and articulated through gendered negotiations and acted out within the changing and differing setting of the household. The book is divided into four sections. The first section provides a theoretical historical and philosophical setting whilst the following three sections provide empirical contributions which examine aspects of Gendered Care dimensions of Gendered Time and Space and straddling work and home Gendered Work Income and Power. Family Violence Deborah Frankel-Howard, Canada. Health and Welfare Canada. Policy, Communications and Information Branch, 1989. The purpose of this review is to provide an analytical overview of recent literature in the area of family violence. The review covers scholarly research, theoretical approaches and practical applications to prevention, protection and treatment of family violence.

Family Sexual Abuse Jeanette E. Truchsess, 1991. Handbook for Screening Adolescents at Psychosocial Risk Mark I. Singer, Lynn T. Singer, Trina M. Anglin, 1993-05-17. Nurses and social workers who work in urban hospital emergency departments frequently encounter youths who are involved in gang violence and substance abuse who are depressed who have attempted suicide or who have been sexually assaulted. Youth workers and probation officers need to recognize the multiple problems in which their charges may be involved such as sexual risk taking, substance abuse, delinquency and violence. This handbook provides all the information necessary for all professionals working with adolescents to understand and recognize their major psychosocial problems. Each chapter is written by an experienced clinician or research scientist who is a recognized expert in his or her field. Topics include family problems, substance abuse, head injury, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, depression, suicide, gang involvement, antisocial behavior, reproductive health, sexual and physical abuse, eating disorders and psychosis. Advances in Adolescent Psychology LeRoy Douglas Travis, Claudio Violato, 2001.
