

Historic GREENVILLE

INCORPORATED AS A VILLAGE IN 1867 AND AS A CITY IN 1871

Lafayette Street

This is the earliest known photo of Greenville, taken in 1868. The workers shown are laying a wooden trestle to span across Lafayette Street at Washington Street. Growth in the village happened rapidly. Within 18 years of John Green's arrival, Greenville boasted 2 sawmills, 2 blacksmith shops, a saw & sand factory, a grist mill, planing mill, tannery, foundry, wagon factory, printing office, 8 general stores, 3 grocers, a drug store, a book store, a clothing store, a furniture store, and 3 schools.

The northwest corner of Lafayette and Grove Street has been home to a hotel since 1855. The first hotel on this site, the Roseman House, burned in a fire in 1867. It was replaced by the Northern Hotel, which burned down in 1900. In 1901, T.D. Winter commissioned the Winter Inn to be built. The Winter Inn remains the longest-standing hotel in Greenville's history.

Early History

Before John Green arrived in 1844, Indians were the only inhabitants of the area, living on land near a bend in the Flat River at Shawnee Road and Industrial Drive. Two well-established Indian trails crisscrossed the area. The blue trail, at left, was the Hagerman-Franklin trail, and the red trail at right was known as the "tip-over" trail which came up from Blanding and joined them on its way north to Turk Lake.

John Green arrived in 1844 from New York and built his first cabin where Thayer Park is located on Franklin Street. He and his brother-in-law Samuel Deane built the first sawmill on the Flat River. Logging and the Flat River played an important role in the development of the town.

This photo shows Lafayette Street, looking south, in the early 1900s. The three-story Crocker building at right was built in 1875 and sat at the northwest corner of Lafayette Street and Montcalm Street. The third floor of this building housed a 600 person capacity opera house for speakers and performances. Susan B. Anthony spoke about women's suffrage in 1875. The building was torn down in 1969.
