

Constitutional Law Outline
Professor Leong
Spring 2021

I. State Action

- a. The Constitution almost entirely deals with State Action:
  - i. State Action is necessary (but not sufficient) to bring a constitutional claim
  - ii. The question of whether there is state action is completely separate from the merits of the claim
  - iii. State action = an action taken by the government (at any level)
    - 1. Action by actors must be taken in their official capacity
- b. In 1883, the Civil Rights Cases came before the USSC:
  - i. Does the 14th Amendment give Congress the power to regulate individuals who engage in certain behaviors?
    - 1. 14 does not invest Congress with the power to legislate upon subjects which are the domain of state legislation, but to provide modes of relief against state legislation (state action)
      - a. Thus, state action is required to trigger constitutional action
- c. Shelley v. Kraemer → They went to the state court to enforce the covenant, and the state court did enforce it → this is now state action which cannot stand
- d. Brentwood Academy v. Tennessee Secondary School Athletics Association
→ Pervasive Entwinement Test:
  - i. Is there pervasive entwinement between a public entity and a private one, such that a private act can be construed as a public one?
    - 1. This is a totality of the circumstances test
    - 2. Here, the Association in question is private, but 84% of its membership is from public institutions
    - 3. The state allows the Association to run interscholastic athletics
    - 4. Because of the 84% public membership, the Association is an organization of public schools represented by their officials acting in their official capacity to provide an integral element of public schooling
- e. Exceptions:
  - i. Public Function Exception: When a private entity is performing a task that is traditionally an exclusively governmental function, effectively replacing the gov (Brentwood)
  - ii. Entanglement Exception: When the state authorizes or encourages private conduct that would violate the Constitution if that action were performed by the state itself

II. Interpretative Methodology

- a. Textualism: How would an ordinary person in contemporary time understand the plain words of a document?
  - i. Intent of the original drafters = irrelevant
    - 1. Language evolves though, so dismissing intent could be dangerous
  - ii. Principle = Text is the best evidence of what was decided upon when the Constitution was written
