Choice and Allocation Models for the Housing Market J. Rouwendal, 2012-12-06 It is generally agreed that food clothing and shelter are the three basic material needs of all people A simple test for the successfulness of any economic system may therefore be the extent to which it succeeds in providing the population with these commodities One would conjecture that in the countries that are generally considered as highly developed there would be no problems at all with their availability And although this conjecture is to a large extent confirmed by the evidence it is nevertheless surprising that in western economies with the high per capita incomes housing is still an important object for public concern Food and clothing are abundantly available in these countries but the provision of housing is often an object of serious policy concern To mention one striking example in the Netherlands there still exist official figures that mention housing shortages of ten thousands of dwellings This state of affairs is not mentioned here to motivate an exaggerated view on housing problems in Western countries The situation in the Netherlands and comparable countries is indeed much better than that in underdeveloped countries and a comparison with developing countries would presumably show figures which are comparable to those for food or clothing The point I want to make is that even in highly developed market economies where the availability of food and clothing is quite satisfactory the availability of dwellings often is not

Investigating Quality of Urban Life Robert W. Marans, Robert J. Stimson, 2011-08-31 The study of quality of urban life involves both an objective approach to analysis using spatially aggregated secondary data and a subjective approach using unit record survey data whereby people provide subjective evaluations of QOL domains This book provides a comprehensive overview of theoretical perspectives on QOUL and methodological approaches to research design to investigate QOUL and measure QOL dimensions It incorporates empirical investigations into QOUL in a range of cities across the world

Homeowners and Neighborhood

Reinvestment George C. Galster, 1987 This book investigates the efforts of homeowners to maintain and improve their dwelling Their behavior it has found depends on economic variables as well as the sociological structure of their neighborhoods Residential satisfaction expectations of the neighborhood and mobility plans were taken into account Multivariate statistical analyses of models were conducted using household data from Minneapolis and Wooster Ohio Three important findings emerged First homeowners sense of solidarity with their neighbors is as significant in determining their efforts at home upkeep as are their income or age Second the optimism of homeowners toward increases in property values results in behavior opposite to that produced by optimism about neighborhood quality of life This implies that different kinds of predictable gaming behavior occur among homeowners depending on the neighborhoods in which they live Third both short term and extremely long term plans to move prove damaging to home upkeep The results of this study form the basis for a better understanding of such residential phenomena as class succession racial transition and gentrification Galster's findings will also be valuable for analyzing policies that attempt to encourage neighborhood reinvestment

Urban residential location models S.H. Putman, 2012-12-06 The decade of the 1970's has seen substantial improvement in our understanding of the determinants of urban spatial patterns It is typical of western science and technology of the past several centuries that these advances in urban spatial analysis have resulted from the efforts of many individuals No one of these claims to have found the answer rather each contributes some additional understanding of a rather complex set of inter related phenomena All of this most recent work in one way or another rests on preliminary analysis work done in the previous ten to fifteen years Those earlier efforts are the subject of this book A very few studies of urban spatial patterns were done prior to 1960 However it was not until then with the coming of age of electronic data processing machinery that work began in earnest Many theories and theoretical models of urban form were postulated and some were tested Often the tests were inconclusive or unsuccessful The theories often lacked consistency and coherence Some of the testing was inadequate or even inappropriate Much of the research was done amidst the turmoil and sometimes chaos of attempted and often premature application The results were frequently incompletely described if described at all Yet out of all this there began to emerge some clearer notion of the determinants of urban spatial patterns
