Patent Office, 1926 The Adventures of Sally Sir Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, 2005-01-01 Sally looked contentedly down the long table She felt happy at last Everybody was talking and laughing now and her party rallying after an uncertain start was plainly the success she had hoped it would be The first atmosphere of uncomfortable restraint caused she was only too well aware by her brother Fillmore's white evening waistcoat had worn off and the male and female patrons of Mrs Meecher's select boarding house transient and residential were themselves again At her end of the table the conversation had turned once more to the great vital topic of Sally's legacy and what she ought to do with it The next best thing to having money of one's own is to dictate the spending of somebody else's and Sally's guests were finding a good deal of satisfaction in arranging a Budget for her Rumour having put the sum at their disposal at a high figure their suggestions had certain spaciousness Let me tell you said Augustus Bartlett briskly what I'd do if I were you Augustus Bartlett who occupied an intensely subordinate position in the firm of Kahn Morris and Brown the Wall Street brokers always affected a brisk incisive style of speech as befitted a man in close touch with the great ones of Finance I'd sink a couple of hundred thousand in some good safe bond issue we've just put one out which you would do well to consider and play about with the rest When I say play about I mean have a flutter in anything good that crops up Multiple Steel's worth looking at They tell me it'll be up to a hundred and fifty before next Saturday Elsa Doland the pretty girl with the big eyes who sat on Mr Bartlett's left had other views. Buy a theatre, Sally, and put on good stuff. And lose every bean you've got, said a mild young man with a deep voice across the table. If I had a few hundred thousand, said the mild young man, I'd put every cent of it on Benny Whistler for the heavyweight championship. I've private information that Battling Tuke has been got at, and means to lie down in the seventh. Say, listen, interrupted another voice, lemme tell you what I'd do with four hundred thousand. If I had four hundred thousand, said Elsa Doland, I know what would be the first thing I'd do. What's that, asked Sally. Pay my bill for last week, due this morning. Sally got up quickly and flitting down the table, put her arm round her friend's shoulder and whispered in her ear. Elsa, darling, are you really broke? If you are, you know I'll. Elsa Doland laughed. You're an angel, Sally. There's no one like you. You'd give your last cent to anyone. Of course I'm not broke. I've just come back from the road, and I've saved a fortune. I only said that to draw you. Sally returned to her seat, relieved, and found that the company had now divided itself into two schools of thought. The conservative and prudent element, led by Augustus Bartlett, had definitely decided on three hundred thousand in Liberty Bonds, and the rest in some safe real estate, while the smaller, more sporting section, impressed by the mild young man's inside information, had already placed Sally's money on Benny Whistler, doling it out cautiously in small sums, so as not to spoil the market. And so solid it seemed was Mr Tuke's reputation with those in the inner circle of knowledge that the mild young man was confident that if you went about the matter cannily and without precipitation, three to one might be obtained. It seemed to Sally that the time had come to correct certain misapprehensions. I don't know where you get your figures, she said, but I'm afraid they're wrong. I've just twenty-five thousand dollars. The statement had a chilling effect. To these jugglers with half millions, the amount mentioned seemed for the moment almost too small to bother about. It was the sort of sum which they had been mentally setting aside for the heiress's car fare. Then they managed to adjust their minds to it. After all, one could do something even with a pittance like twenty-five thousand.

An English comic novelist and short story writer, P. G. Wodehouse is best known as the creator of the young bachelor Bertie Wooster and his effortlessly superior manservant Jeeves. Wodehouse penned over 90 books and secured a devoted readership across the world. His first success came as a writer of public school stories based on his own childhood experiences, most notably introducing the strikingly original character Psmith. These were followed by light romances, but in 1913, with the publication of the first Blandings Castle novel, Something New, he turned to farce, which became his preferred genre of work. Wodehouse is celebrated for his scholarly command of the English sentence.
