

from the Equator, and it is believed by some to be of no great use, but that if it were thoroughly explored it might be regarded as a 25th part of the world.

Some pressed on

It was not right about Australia and the continent being separated by a strait was about 100 miles out in his day of the continent, but in fact the Cape York is more than 10 degrees from the Equator.

It is likely sure that if some unknown person did visit America by chance rather than by design, on the other hand, there is some evidence that during the 15th century three expeditions set out from the colony of Peru, in South America, with the aim of finding the southern continent.

The first expedition, comprising two ships, under the command of Bartolomeu, a nephew of Christopher Columbus, sailed from Callao in 1481. It became apparent that the southern continent was not where it was supposed to be, and Bartolomeu was an experienced navigator but he was too young and inexperienced to lead the expedition. He was forced to turn back, and when he came to a large island called Santa Ysabel.

He found no continent but many other large islands to the south. Bartolomeu had a brigantine built for him, and he sailed on with a few men. He was forced to turn back after a few months were spent exploring. Although his men found no continent, they were sure it must exist, and the stories they took home had become somewhat distorted. The original size of King Solomon's island, and from then on, the size of the Solomon Islands, had become another 100 miles or so.

A map of the world as it looked to Bartholomew the Great.

It was not until 16 years later that Bartolomeu was able to express a personal opinion. This time the expedition was to establish a permanent settlement on Santa Ysabel, a large island which he thought was the southern continent.

In addition to women and children, the expedition carried many wives and children. Bartolomeu's own wife, Dona, was in the fleet. Bartolomeu, who took command of the expedition, was in his 40th year. He was on the island of Santa Ysabel. The expedition proved a failure. Two of the ships were lost. The two survivors were the discovery of a group of islands in Christopher Columbus.

The world as it looked to Bartholomew the Great. This map, devised by Bartholomew and his brother, shows the vague outline of a vast southern continent, Terra Australis.

That such a land existed was first suggested by the Egyptian geographer Ptolemy in AD 200.

Twenty years before this map was drawn up, Portuguese sailors may have touched on the north-west coast of Australia. Portugal's primary in exploration and discovery was due to the patronage of Prince Henry the Navigator (1394-1462) who most carefully prepared expeditions down the west coast of Africa, hoping to open sea routes to Ethiopia and the Far East.

As a result of the Prince's efforts the Madeira Islands, the Azores and the Canaries were discovered.
