Lewis,2017-08-15 From the inception of slavery as a pillar of the Atlantic World economy both Europeans and Africans feared their mass extermination by the other in a race war In the United States says Kay Wright Lewis this ingrained dread nourished a preoccupation with slave rebellions and would later help fuel the Civil War thwart the aims of Reconstruction justify Jim Crow and even inform civil rights movement strategy And yet says Lewis the historiography of slavery is all but silent on extermination as a category of analysis Moreover little of the existing sparse scholarship interrogates the black perspective on extermination A Curse upon the Nation addresses both of these issues To explain how this belief in an impending race war shaped eighteenth and nineteenth century American politics culture and commerce Lewis examines a wide range of texts including letters newspapers pamphlets travel accounts slave narratives government documents and abolitionist tracts She foregrounds her readings in the long record of exterminatory warfare in Europe and its colonies placing lopsided reprisals against African slave revolts or even rumors of revolts in a continuum with past brutal incursions against the Irish Scots Native Americans and other groups out of favor with the empire Lewis also shows how extermination became entwined with ideas about race and freedom from early in the process of enslavement making survival an important form of resistance for African peoples in America For African Americans enslaved and free the potential for one sided violence was always present and deeply traumatic This groundbreaking study reevaluates how extermination shaped black understanding of the Atlantic slave trade and the political social and economic worlds in which it thrived The Complete
