Benirschke, 2012-12-06 To many the contents of this conference may not seem appropriate at a time when the minds are preoccupied with a population explosion To the participants and guests of this conference however this was a week of fascinating discussions While quantitative aspects of reproduction were touched upon it was mostly a search for an understanding of the qualitative aspects of reproduction and its failure Only when we understand these more completely will it be possible to render optimum care and have the foundations for meaningful population control The conference was conceived in discussions at the Committee on Pathology of the National Academy of Sciences Washington in 1965 It was felt that investigators in medicine and the veterinary fields would profit greatly from a closer liaison All too frequently we work relatively isolated in our respective fields and with the burgeoning information filling our journals we have not enough time and leisure to stand back and attempt a comparative look at the subject of study Often we are not familiar with the techniques other disciplines use and which we could well employ to great advantage while this applies to many aspects of medicine a comparative approach to the study of reproductive failure seemed most advantageous at this time Advances in Comparative Physiology and Biochemistry V4 O Lowenstein, 2012-12-02 Advances in Comparative Physiology and Biochemistry Volume 4 presents five papers on the different aspects of comparative physiology The first two studies deal with movement The first examines the effects of environmental conditions on the motile behavior of amoebas The second investigates the mechanisms and coordination of cellular movement The third study on the endocrine functions of the hypothalamus in the fishes amphibians and reptiles provides the comparative endocrinologist with a basis for integrating the state of knowledge on non mammalian and mammalian function of this organ complex The fourth study deals with the central and peripheral control of arthropod movements The final study surveys the comparative physiology of populations of gametes Aside from providing readers with a comparative vista of reproductive physiology from a unique perspective it introduces a new hypothesis on the overproduction of gametes commonly found in living organisms a hypothesis which may have far reaching consequences for the interpretation of the reproductive process Physiological Effects of Immunity Against Reproductive Hormones R. G. Edwards, M. H. Johnson, 1976-03-25 Fertility and Infertility in the Domestic Animals John Archibald Laing, 1970 Advances in the Study of Behavior Marc Naguib, 2020-04-19 Advances in the Study of Behavior Volume 52 provides users with the latest insights in this ever evolving field Users will find new information on a variety of species including ecological determinants of sex roles and female sexual selection copulatory behavior and genital morphology in vertebrates proximate and ultimate influences on social behavior and more Sample chapters in this release include Ecological determinants of sex roles and female sexual selection Sensory information in social insects How the material basis of colors impacts how they evolve participate in behavioral interactions and interface with other life history characters Fiddler crabs the Evolution of female coloration and more Serves the increasing number of scientists engaged in the study of animal behavior Makes another important contribution to the development of the field Presents theoretical ideas and research to those studying animal behavior and related fields The Era of Assisted Reproductive Technologies Tailored to the Specific Necessities of Species, Industry and Case Reports David Martín Hidalgo, 2021-08-16 Nowadays assisted reproductive technologies ARTs have a pivotal role not only in achieving fertilization in subfertile animals but they are also involved in the management of the herd decreasing disease spread and even allowing offspring sex selection Nonetheless there are differences between species or even within species that have led researchers worldwide to focus on those differences in order to bypass these specific difficulties This Special Issue titled The Era of Assisted Reproductive Technologies Tailored to the Specific Necessities of Species Industry and Case Reports and published in Animals is composed of 12 original manuscripts and three reviews that offer an overview of current and future ARTs used to improve reproductive outcomes mainly focused on farm animals such as horse pig bovine rabbit and ovine species Thus the Special Issue covers information from the classical point of view including comparative studies of different semen extenders to the most advanced technologies of sperm selection by thermotaxis or chemoattractants as well as the improvement of sperm features by red light irradiation The female and embryo contributions to ART outcomes are also covered for instance with a study that improves our knowledge by the metabolomic description of follicular fluid composition or the description of better culture conditions of oocytes In brief this Special Issue provides a balanced overview of emerging techniques and technologies used to preserve improve rescue or even create fertility for domestic farm animals with high economic impact

Animal Andrology Peter J Chenoweth, Steven Lorton, 2014-04-30 Understanding animal andrology is fundamental to optimising genetic breeding traits in domestic and wild animals This book provides extensive coverage of male reproductive biology discussing the essentials of sperm production harvest and preservation before covering the applications to a range of animals including cattle horses pigs small ruminants camelids cats and dogs poultry and exotic species It also examines the laboratory procedures that provide the basis of general fertility research Environmental Health Perspectives, 1987
