Traditions and Transitions Curricula for German Studies is a collection of essays by Canadian and international scholars on the topic of why and how the curriculum for post secondary German studies should evolve Its twenty chapters written by international experts in the field of German as a foreign or second language explore new perspectives on and orientations in the curriculum In light of shifts in the linguistic and intercultural needs of today's global citizens these scholars in German studies question the foundations and motivations of common curriculum goals traditional program content standard syllabus design and long standing classroom practice Several chapters draw on a range of contemporary theories from critical applied linguistics second language acquisition curriculum theory and cultural studies to propose and encourage new curriculum thinking and reflective practice related to the translingual and cross cultural subjectivities of speakers learners and teachers of German Other chapters describe and analyze specific examples of emerging trends in curriculum practice for learners as users of German This volume will be invaluable to university and college faculty working in the discipline of German studies as well as in other modern languages and second language education in general Its combination of theoretical and descriptive explorations will help readers develop a critical awareness and understanding of curriculum for teaching German and to implement new approaches in the interests of their students Books in Print Supplement ,2002 Directory of American Scholars: Foreign languages, linguistics and philology ,1999 AAUSC 2014 Volume - Issues in Language Program Direction: Innovation and Accountability in Language Program Evaluation Nicole Mills,John Norris,2015-01-01 Despite rapid globalization within contemporary society and the seemingly obvious need for the study of foreign languages FL and cultures recruitment to undergraduate FL degrees has dwindled graduate programs have disappeared and institutions have restructured independent language departments into mega departments of languages literatures and cultures At the same time the FL and humanities disciplines have engaged in soul searching exercises in an effort to understand and express a renewed sense of value for the study of foreign language and culture As a result of these kinds of societal and disciplinary movements FL programs along with other educational sectors are facing the increased need to engage with peripheral forces like accountability and accreditation to express and ensure their value through outcomes assessment and to begin to think innovate and behave programmatically Key to enacting these changes systematically and effectively is heightened awareness of the importance of program evaluation not only as a means to demonstrate how and why FL study is a valuable pursuit in today s world but also as a process through which sound improvements can be made participants can learn and educational relevance can be sought Important Notice Media content referenced within the product description or the product text may not be available in the ebook version AAUSC 2013 Volume - Issues in Language Program Direction Cristina Sanz,Lado,Stacey Katz Bourns,2014-01-01 The democratization of schooling and greater access to higher education together with the implementation of language requirements in colleges and universities across the United States has led to a higher degree of diversity in language classrooms One usually thinks of gender ethnic racial or social diversity but individual differences including learning disabilities and special needs also contribute to diversity and have an impact on assessment placement and curriculum In their role as administrators and teacher educators Language Program Directors LPDs seek to integrate current practices and research in applied linguistics into program design and administration including assessment To make individual differences a theoretically grounded integral component of their decision making processes LPDs need resources that provide cutting edge primary and secondary research on the conceptualization measurement and consequences of individual differences on language development in the classroom This volume provides LPDs with the means to transmit information to their instructors in effective ways so that the instructors develop a sophisticated understanding of individual differences including learning disabilities special needs and strategies for dealing with diverse student populations In addition this volume creates a forum for reflections about and solutions to challenges related to diversity as it relates to individual differences Important Notice Media content referenced within the product description or the product text may not be available in the ebook version Language Program Direction Gillian

Lord, Judith Liskin-Gasparro, Manel Lacorte, 2014 Practical tips and theory for Language Program Directors Language Program Direction Theory and Practice combines helpful practical everyday advice with research and theory to offer a rich contemporary resource for Language Program Directors or anyone involved in administering a language program Intended for current and future foreign language teaching professionals volumes in the Theory and Practice in Second Language Classroom Instruction series examine issues in teaching and learning in language classrooms The topics selected and the discussions of them draw in principled ways on theory and practice in a range of fields including second language acquisition foreign language education educational policy language policy linguistics and other areas of applied linguistics AAUSC 2015 Volume - Issues in Language Program Direction: Integrating the Arts: Creative Thinking about FL Curricula and Language Program Direction Lisa Parkes, Colleen Ryan, Stacey Katz Bourns, 2016-01-01 Integrating the arts in foreign language curricula enables us to connect language to other semiotic spaces and cultural productions such as theater the fine arts art history architecture music museum cultures and literature By embracing the notion of texts as socially historically and culturally situated practices of which the written text is but one product we can conjoin the basic literacy of reading and writing with a broader range of visual aural and spatial signifying acts Understood in this way the arts become a source and stimulus for not only textual analysis and communicative exchange but also subjective response and emotional experience In other words by interacting with art evaluating interpreting experiencing embodying and even producing it in any one of its many forms learners can understand culture as a process in which they are motivated to participate as subjects This process can deepen the cognitive social aesthetic and subjective dimensions of language learning While many new instructors have interest or expertise in the use of one or more art forms we cannot assume that they know how to incorporate the arts in their lesson plans Our teacher training programs therefore have the potential to be transformative sites where the concept of foreign language literacy and literacies takes shape through effectively varied pedagogical practices This volume will not only provide a concrete vision for approaches to materials and learning goals but also suggest directions for teacher training and long term professional development for integrating the arts Important Notice Media content referenced within the product description or the product text may not be available in the ebook version
