practices and institutions that shape contemporary conservation have evolved gradually since the early nineteenth century. Moral Entanglements further shows that the practices and institutions in which bird conservation is entangled differ between the two countries. In Britain birds derived their meaning in the context of the game of bird watching as a leisure activity. Here birds are now as then the most popular and best protected taxonomic group of wildlife due to their particularly suitable status as toys in a collecting game turning nature into a playground. In Germany by contrast birds were initially part of the world of work. They were protected as useful economic tools rendering services of ecological pest control in a system of agricultural production modeled after the factory shop floor. Based on this extensive analysis Bargheer formulates a sociology of morality informed by a pragmatist theory of value.

Birds are among the most extensively studied of all animal groups. Hundreds of academic journals and thousands of scientists are devoted to bird research, while amateur enthusiasts called birdwatchers or more commonly birders probably number in the millions. Birds are categorised as a biological class Aves. The earliest known species of this class is Archaeopteryx lithographica from the Late Jurassic period. According to the most recent consensus, Aves and a sister group, the order Crocodilia, together form a group of unnamed rank, the Archosauria. Phylogenetically, Aves is usually defined as all descendants of the most recent common ancestor of modern birds or of a specific modern bird species like Passer domesticus and Archaeopteryx. Modern phylogenies place birds in the dinosaur clade Theropoda. Modern birds are divided into two superorders: the Paleognathae, mostly flightless birds like ostriches, and the wildly diverse Neognathae, containing all other birds.
