methodical rhetorical analysis can be done in selected practical fields of application Literature Music Images and Film

The Body in History, Culture, and the Arts Justyna Jajszczok, Aleksandra Musiał, 2019-03-27 The aim of this book is to explore the body in various historical contexts and to take it as a point of departure for broader historiographical projects The chapters in the volume present the ways in which the body constitutes a valuable and productive object of historical analysis especially as a lens through which to trace histories of social political and cultural phenomena and processes More specifically the authors use the body as a tool for critical re examination of particular histories of human experience and of societal and cultural practices thus contributing to the burgeoning area of body history in terms of both specific case studies as well as historiography in general

Folk Art and Modern Culture in Republican China Felicity Lufkin, 2016-01-21 Folk art is now widely recognized as an integral part of the modern Chinese cultural heritage but in the early twentieth century awareness of folk art as a distinct category in the visual arts was new Internationally intellectuals in different countries used folk arts to affirm national identity and cultural continuity in the midst of the changes of the modern era In China artists critics and educators likewise saw folk art as a potentially valuable resource perhaps it could be a fresh source of cultural inspiration and energy representing the authentic voice of the people in contrast to what could be seen as the limited and elitist classical tradition At the same time many Chinese intellectuals also saw folk art as a problem they believed that folk art as it was promoted superstitious and backward ideas that were incompatible with modernization and progress In either case folk art was too important to be left in the hands of the folk educated artists and researchers felt a responsibility intervene to reform folk art and create new popular art forms that would better serve the needs of the modern nation In the early 1930s folk art began to figure in the debates on social role of art and artists that were waged in the pages of the Chinese press the first major exhibition of folk art was held in Hangzhou and the new print movement claimed the print as a popular artistic medium while for the most part declaring its distance from contemporary folk printmaking practices During the war against Japan from 1937 to 1945 educated artists deployed imagery and styles drawn from folk art in morale boosting propaganda images but worried that this work fell short of true artistic accomplishment and pandering to outmoded tastes The questions raised in interaction with folk art during this pivotal period questions about heritage about the social position of art and the exercise of cultural authority continue to resonate into the present day

Current History and Modern Culture ,1894 Evangelical Identity and Contemporary Culture Mathew Guest,2007-12-01 Building on an ethnographic study of St Michael le Belfrey Church in York a recognized leader in charismatic renewal mission and evangelical innovation since the 1960s this book explores how a persistent tradition of cultural engagement may generate growth while at the same time bringing about significant changes in the structure and function of the evangelical congregation and in the social construction of Christian identity itself This is the first sociological study of St Michael le Belfrey and the first to take seriously the question of how blazing the trail in terms of mission worship and fellowship influences the way in which congregations exist as Christian communities within the contemporary British context

Popular Culture Values and the Arts Ray B. Browne, Lawrence A. Kreiser, Jr.,2014-01-10 In countries around the world the rise of class divisions and unbridled capitalism are changing the conventional definitions of art and esthetics Historically the philanthropy of the elite has played a leading role in supporting funding and distributing artistic works While such measures may be pure in intent many worry that private funding may be gentrifying the arts and creating a situation in which art will only be valued for its prestige or worse its price tag This collection of essays examines the current movement to democratize the arts and make the world of artistic endeavor open and accessible to all

The Metareferential Turn in Contemporary Arts and Media Werner Wolf, 2011-01-01 One possible description of the contemporary medial landscape in Western culture is that it has gone meta to an unprecedented extent so that a remarkable meta culture has emerged. Indeed, metareference – i.e. self-reflexive comments on or references to various kinds of media-related aspects of a given medial artefact or performance – specific media and arts or the media in general is omnipresent and can nowadays be encountered in high art and literature as frequently as in their popular counterparts in the traditional media as well as in new media. From the Simpsons, pop music, children's literature, computer games and pornography to the contemporary visual arts, feature film, postmodern fiction, drama and even architecture everywhere one can find metareferential explorations, comments on or criticism of representation, medial conventions or modes of production and reception and related issues. Within individual media and genres, notably in research on postmodernist metafiction, this outspoken tendency towards metaization is known well enough and various reasons have been given for it. Yet never has there been an attempt to account for what one may aptly term the current metareferential turn on a larger transmedial scale. This is what The Metareferential Turn in Contemporary Arts and Media: Forms, Functions, Attempts at Explanation undertakes to do as a sequel to its predecessor, the volume Metareference across Media, vol. 4 in the series Studies in Intermediality, which was dedicated to theoretical issues and transhistorical case studies. Coming from diverse disciplinary and methodological backgrounds, the contributors to the present volume propose explanations of impressive subtlety, breadth and depth for the current situation in addition to exploring individual forms and functions of metareference which may be linked with particular explanations. As expected, there is no monocausal reason to be found for the situation under scrutiny, yet the proposals made have in their combination a remarkable explanatory power which contributes to a better understanding of an important facet of current media production and reception. The essays assembled in the volume, which also contains an introduction with a detailed survey over the possibilities of accounting for the metareferential turn, will be relevant to students and scholars from a wide variety of fields: cultural history at large, intermediality and media studies as well as more particularly literary studies, music, film and art history.
