Causality and Mind

Nicholas Jolley, 2013-11-28 Causality and Mind presents seventeen of Nicholas Jolley's essays on early modern philosophy which focus on two main themes One theme is the continuing debate over the nature of causality in the period from Descartes to Hume Jolley shows that despite his revolutionary stance Descartes did no serious re thinking about causality it was left to his unorthodox disciple Malebranche to argue that there is no place for natural causality in the new mechanistic picture of the physical world Several essays explore critical reactions to Malebranche's occasionalism in the writings of Leibniz Berkeley and Hume and show how in their different ways Leibniz and Hume respond to Malebranche by re instating the traditional view that science is the search for causes A second theme of the volume is the set of issues posed by Descartes' innovations in the philosophy of mind It is argued that Malebranche is once again a pivotal figure In opposition to Descartes Malebranche insists that ideas the objects of thought are not psychological but abstract entities he thus opposes Descartes' dustbin theory of the mind Malebranche also challenges Descartes' assumption that intentionality is a mark of the mental and his commitment to the superiority of self knowledge over knowledge of body Other essays discuss the debate over innate ideas Locke's polemics against Descartes' theory of mind and the issue of Leibniz's phenomenalism A major aim of the volume is to show that philosophers in the period are systematic critics of their contemporaries and predecessors

Body, Mind and Self in Hume's Critical Realism Fred Wilson, 2013-05-02 This essay proposes that Hume's non substantialist bundle account of minds is basically correct The concept of a person is not a metaphysical notion but a forensic one that of a being who enters into the moral and normative relations of civil society A person is a bundle but it is also a structured bundle Hume's metaphysics of relations is argued must be replaced by a more adequate one such as that of Russell but beyond that Hume's account is essentially correct In particular it is argued that it is one's character that constitutes one's identity and that sympathy and the passions of pride and humility are central in forming and maintaining one's character and one's identity as a person But also central is one's body a person is an embodied consciousness the notion that one's body is essential to one's identity is defended at length Various concepts of mind and consciousness are examined for example neutral monism and intentionality and also the concept of privacy and our inferences to other minds
