Police And Social Conflict Rhetoric And Reality:

The Police and Social Conflict Nigel Fielding, 1991-01-01 Volume two in a series which provides reports on areas of British life conventionally conceived to be conflict laden assessing the scale and character of the conflict in those areas The series aims to consider new or little heeded evidence balancing the claims of different commentators and placing such conflict in its historical and social contest allowing intelligent judgements to be made It provides prognoses about the likely development of that conflict and ascertain what measures have been taken to manage it and what success they have had drawing on international experience where helpful

The Fragmentation of Policing in American Cities Hung-En Sung, 2001-11-30 The relationship between police and the communities and citizens they serve has long been a topic of study and controversy Sung provides a place oriented theory of policing to guide strategies for crime control and problem oriented policing He contends that community policing is a product of power relations among communities Sung also explores how police and citizens interact with each other in stratified and residentially segregated communities how services are delivered by police how citizens respond to those charged with protecting them and enforcing the law Illuminating the police neighborhood and advancing a clear hypothesis for explaining and predicting changes in police behavior this both provides a conceptual platform for public policy debate planning and evaluation of police public safety and democratic governance According to Sung place has everything to do with the success of community policing and the attitudes of both police and citizens contribute to the success or failure of police initiatives as well as the level of crime inherent in a community By focusing on the social and political forces that shape the residential patterns of American cities and the organization of police work Sung provides a theoretical framework for considering the relations between police and citizens in different neighborhoods He concludes that current modes of police community relations and crime prevention will improve only if the policies adopted encourage the transformation of marginal communities into communities where citizens feel a shared responsibility for maintaining and peace and order This unique contribution to a growing field of study provides an ecological theory of police citizen relations that begins with the inequality and segregation inherent in many American cities

Conflict of Interest in Policing Cindy Davids, 2008 Conflict of interest allegations have become a prominent part of the landscape of political and public sector ethics in Australia and overseas The arena of policing has not been immune from this problem and this book is based on unique and unfettered access to ten years of internal investigation files held by Victoria Police Through detailed analysis of actual complaint cases it gives the reader a comprehensive map by which to chart the particular kinds of interests involved the nature of conflicts with official police duties and the particular contexts from which conflicts of interest emerge The book examines conflicts of interest across the private and public realm of the everyday lives of police officers The author outlines how the problem of conflict of interest is an important aspect of police ethics arguing that recognition of and accountability for conflict of interest may be a significant element in preventing upstream police misconduct and corruption Conflict of Interest in Policing seeks to provide a conceptual and practical understanding of how integrity and trust must be integrated into the profession of policing through processes of active responsibility rather than more traditional passive obedience to prescriptive rules

The Privatization of Policing Brian Forst,Peter K. Manning,1999-06-10 The increasing reliance on private security services raises questions about the effects of privatization on the quality of public police forces particularly in high crime low income areas In an effective pro and con format two experts on policing offer two strikingly different perspectives on this trend towards privatization In the process they provide an unusually thoughtful discussion of the origins of both the public police and the private security sectors the forces behind the recent growth of private security operations and the risks to public safety posed by privatization In his critique of privatization Peter K Manning focuses on issues of free market theory and management practices such as Total Quality Management that he believes are harmful to the traditional police mandate to control crime He questions the appropriateness of strategies that emphasize service to consumers For Brian Forst the free market paradigm and economic incentives do not carry the same stigma He argues that neither public nor private policing should have a monopoly on law enforcement activities and he predicts an even more varied mix of public and private police activities than are currently available Following the two main sections of the book each author assesses the other's contribution reflecting on not just their points of departure but also on the areas in which they agree The breadth and depth of the discussion makes this book essential for both scholars and practitioners interested in policing generally and privatization in particular
