Race Reality:

Race, Reality, and Realpolitik Jeffrey Sommers, 2015-11-11 The year 2015 marked the centennial of the 1915 United States occupation of Haiti and Haiti's resistance to that signal event in its history. This study surveys the issues of economics, race, and realpolitik embedded in the political economy of U.S. interactions with Haiti that resulted in occupation. It then interrogates what constitutes the state as it pertains to foreign policy along with an inspection of who benefits from empire. This approach eschews tired dichotomies of whether or not the United States as a whole materially benefited from empire to instead simply look at who individually gained and what were the capacities of these beneficiaries to craft policy. Next, it delivers insights derived from a forensic analysis of Woodrow Wilson's perception of race and his decision to intervene in Haiti. Attitudes enabling United States military leaders to implement a policy of occupation are provided through a study of Admiral William Caperton's role in the intervention. The focus then telescopes out to inspect the role played by the press, especially as booster for commercial opportunities. In short, the project answers the questions of why, who, and how American empire was undertaken through the case study of Haiti and its occupation in 1915.

Reality TV Susan Murray, Laurie Ouellette, 2009 A collection of essays which provide a comprehensive picture of how and why the genre of reality television emerged, what it means, how it differs from earlier television programming, and how it engages societies, industries, and individuals.

Reality TV Jon Kraszewski, 2017-02-24 From early first wave programs such as Candid Camera, An American Family, and The Real World to the shows on our television screens and portable devices today, reality television consistently takes us to cities such as New York, Los Angeles, and Boston to imagine the place of urbanity in American culture and society. Jon Kraszewski offers the first extended account of this phenomenon as he makes the politics of urban space the center of his history and theory of reality television. Kraszewski situates reality television in a larger economic transformation that started in the 1980s when America went from an industrial economy when cities were home to all classes to its post-industrial economy as cities became key points in a web of global financing expelling all economic classes except the elite and the poor. Reality television in the industrial era reworked social relationships based on class, race, and gender for liberatory purposes which resulted in an egalitarian ethos in the genre. However, reality television of the post-industrial era attempts to convince viewers that cities still serve their interests even though most viewers find city life today economically untenable. Each chapter uses a key theoretical concept from spatial theory such as power geometries, diasporic nostalgia, orientalism, the imagination of social expulsions, and the relationship between the country and the city to illuminate the way reality television engages this larger transformation of urban space in America.

Monahan, 2011 How does our understanding of the reality or lack thereof of race as a category of being affect our understanding of racism as a social phenomenon, and vice versa? all or nothing categories with clear and unambiguous boundaries Monahan calls for the emergence of a creolizing subjectivity that would place such ambiguity at the center of our understanding of race Reality TV June

Philosophy and the Mixed Race Experience Tina Fernandes Botts, 2016-01-21. Philosophy and the Mixed Race Experience is a collection of essays by philosophers about the mixed race experience. Each essay is meant to represent one of three possible things: 1) what the philosopher sees as the philosopher's best work; 2) evidence of the possible impact of the philosopher's mixed race experience on the philosopher's work; or 3) the philosopher's philosophical take on the mixed race experience. The book has two primary goals: 1) to collect together for the first time the work of professional academic philosophers who have had the mixed race experience; and 2) to bring these essays together for the purpose of adding to the conversation on the question of the degree to which factual identity and philosophical work may be related. The book also examines the possible relationship between the mixed race experience and certain philosophical positions. A Companion to Reality Television Laurie Ouellette, 2013-12-16. How Real Is Reality TV? David S. Escoffery, 2014-12-03. American viewers are attracted to what they see as the non-scripted, unpredictable freshness of reality television. But although the episodes may not be scripted, the shows are constructed within a deliberately designed framework reflecting societal values. The political, economic, and personal issues of reality TV are in many ways simply an exaggerated version of everyday life, allowing us to identify perhaps more closely than we care to admit with the characters onscreen. With 16 essays from scholars around the world, this volume discusses the notion of representation in reality television. It explores how both audiences and producers negotiate the gulf between representations and truth in reality shows such as Survivor, The Apprentice, Big Brother, The Nanny, American Idol, Extreme Makeover, Joe Millionaire, and The Amazing Race. Various identity categories and character types found in these shows are discussed, and the accuracy of their television portrayal examined. Dealing with the concept of reality audience reception.
