

the English ruling class and had a feeling of superiority. They looked down upon Indians and treated them with arrogance and often insulted them. Such acts of unjust discrimination alienated the British from the Indian masses.

III. Economic Causes

The economic policies of the British resulted in impoverishing all the segments of Indian society, except a handful of collaborators among the Indians.

(1) Exploitation of Economic Resources of India :

The East India Company reduced agricultural India to an economic colony to serve the interests of industrial England. The Company purchased textiles, indigo, spices and tea from India and sold them abroad at exorbitant prices. By buying and exporting Indian goods, the Company encouraged their production in India. But gradually Indian textiles began to compete with the textiles manufactured in England. The British put pressure on the East India Company to forbid the sale of Indian textiles in England. It put restriction on the import of Indian textiles imposing heavy import duties on such goods.

(2) Subordination of Indian Industry :

After the Industrial Revolution, England developed its own textile industry. This affected the textile industry in India. Goods manufactured in India were subjected to high import duties in England. Secondly, the Company purchased raw cotton and jute from India at cheaper rates for factories in England. Soon, India became a country supplying raw materials to England. The British manufactured finished goods from Indian raw

Report Of The Bombay Economic Indust:

Traditional Industry in the Economy of Colonial India Tirthankar Roy,1999-11-04 The majority of workers in South Asia are employed in industries that rely on manual labour and craft skills Some of these industries have existed for centuries and survived great changes in consumption and technology over the last 150 years In earlier studies historians of the region focused on mechanized rather than craft industries arguing that traditional manufacturing was destroyed or devitalized during the colonial period and that modern industry is substantially different Exploring new material from research into five traditional industries Tirthankar Roy s book contests these notions demonstrating that while traditional industry did evolve during the Industrial Revolution these transformations had a positive rather than destructive effect on manufacturing generally In fact the book suggests the major industries in post independence India were shaped by such transformations Tirthankar Roy s book offers new and penetrating insights into India s economic and social history
