Ernest K. Moy, 1952 No Dogs in China William Kinmond, 1957-12-15 In 1949 the bamboo curtain clattered down over one fifth of the people of the world In one sudden twist of history a vast community that had been militarily and politically allied with the West was transmuted into the ideological foe of everything the free world stands for With the surprise intervention by Red China in Korea a new alignment of world powers was confirmed and the bamboo curtain had been fastened down securely If the people of China were inadequately known in the years before the Red Revolution all free intercourse between East and West was now interrupted completely Chinese life could be described only by released westerners who had viewed it through prison bars or it had to be interpreted from the incredibly distorted releases of the communist propaganda bureaus Suddenly in 1956 China offered to open its doors to western reporters wishing to come and see what was really happening in their country In the spring of 1957 William Kinmond Staff Reporter for the Toronto Globe and Mail entered Red China with assurances that he might travel where he wished and report what he liked or disliked This is his report on China at this moment in history

Fighting on the Cultural Front Hongshan Li,2024-04-09 The Cold War conflict between the United States and the People s Republic of China did not only encompass political military diplomatic and economic clashes The two powers also confronted each other on the cultural front Despite a long history of extensive and mostly constructive cultural interactions the two nations cut off existing ties in the late 1940s and early 1950s and established new relationships aimed at attacking and isolating each other Even after Beijing and Washington permitted cultural exchange as part of their effort to normalize diplomatic relations in the 1970s the weaponization of cultural interactions continued Hongshan Li provides a groundbreaking account of the confrontation between the United States and the People s Republic of China on the Cold War s cultural front He investigates the origins evolution and significance of the role of cultural interactions in the shifting relations between the United States and the PRC from the late 1940s through the late 1970s Li demonstrates that the drastic transformation of U S China cultural interactions not only altered the course of Sino American cultural relations but also shaped the Cold War experience of the two peoples Fighting on the Cultural Front examines topics such as competition and conflicts over Chinese students and scholars stranded in the United States maneuvers on the authorization of journalistic exchanges the establishment of Taiwan as a cultural bastion and Beijing's promotion of its revolutionary ideology through individual U S citizens particularly African Americans This important book offers a new lens on the history of U S China relations and the cultural side of the global Cold War Editor & Publisher ,1917
