

Critical Analysis of the Film Requiem for a Dream

The film Requiem for a Dream (dir. Darren Aronofsky, 2000) depicts four individuals and their increasing addiction to substances. This psychological drama narrates parallel encounters linked by the relationship among the lonely. Taking place in Brooklyn, the audience tracks the four interconnected characters down a spiraling pit with no return. While the film could perceive as merely a reflection on addiction, Aronofsky's content is based on the obsession with consumption and is unlimited to the conventional definition of a drug. In fact, Requiem for a Dream questions what could be considered a drug, the individual and group delusions of the 'American Dream', the obsessions from which these fallacies form, and to what heights to which the characters will climb to fulfill such misconceptions and the depths to which they plunge when the rose-colored glasses are removed.

The general approach to Requiem for a Dream is to digest it as a film about addiction, but addiction solely acts as a plot device to move the storyline. Aronofsky presents a controlling metaphor in the first scenes of each character as they present themselves on the screen. As they introduce themselves to the viewer, it is apparent that each character is trapped. For example, the first scene in which the mother, Sarah Goldfarb, has locked herself in a closet while her son, Harry, is attempting to coax her into allowing him to steal her television. The screen is split in two as we witness Sara refuse and as Harry persuades. Sara is trapped inside this closet as an object tries to take away her comfort.

When Sara receives an anonymous phone call about how she has been 'selected' to be on television, her obsession begins. Sara progressively becomes dependent on the idea of Requiem TV and Requiem TV becomes a
