Open Houses Barbara Leckie, 2018-07-06 Barbara Leckie's Open Houses addresses nineteenth century documentary and print culture dedicated to convincing the reader of the wretchedness of housing of the poor and its urgent need for reform. It illustrates the ways in which looking into these houses animated new models for social critique in tandem with new forms for the novel.

Historic House Museums in the United States and the United Kingdom Linda Young, 2016-12-13 Historic House Museums in the United States and the United Kingdom A History addresses the phenomenon of historic houses as a distinct species of museum. Everyone understands the special nature of an art museum, a national museum or a science museum, but house museum nearly always requires clarification. In the United States the term is almost synonymous with historic preservation; in the United Kingdom it is simply unfamiliar, the very idea being conflated with stately homes and the National Trust. By analyzing the motivation of the founders and subsequent keepers of house museums, Linda Young identifies a typology that casts light on what house museums were intended to represent and their significance or lack thereof today. This book examines heroes' houses once inhabited by great persons (e.g. Shakespeare's birthplace, Washington's Mount Vernon), artwork houses, national identity as specially visible in house design style and technique (e.g. Frank Lloyd Wright houses), Modernist houses, collectors' houses, a microcosm of collecting in situ domestic subsequently presented to the nation as the exemplars of taste (e.g. Sir John Soane's Museum, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum), English country houses, the palaces of the aristocracy maintained thanks to primogeniture but threatened with redundancy and rescued as museums to be touted as the peak of English national culture, English country houses, the palaces of the aristocracy maintained for centuries thanks to primogeniture but threatened by redundancy and strangely rescued as museums now touted as the peak of English national culture, Everyman woman's social history houses, the modern domestic response to elite houses presented as social history but tinged with generic ancestor veneration (e.g. tenement house museums in Glasgow and New York).

The White House Looks South William Edward Leuchtenburg, 2005 At a time when race, class and gender dominate historical writing, Leuchtenburg argues that place is no less significant. In a period when America is said to be homogenized, he shows that sectional distinctions persist. And in an era when political history is devalued, he demonstrates that government can profoundly affect people's lives and that presidents can be change makers.
