

Hot Rolled Section

- The metallurgical process of Hot rolling, used mainly to produce sheet metal or simple cross sections from billets describes the method of when industrial metal is passed or deformed between a set of work rolls and the temperature of the metal is generally above its recrystallization temperature.
- Hot rolling permits large deformations of the metal to be achieved with a low number of rolling cycles.
- Hot rolling is primarily concerned with manipulating material shape and geometry rather than mechanical properties.
- You'll find hot rolled products like hot rolled steel bars in the welding and construction trades such as making railroad tracks, I-beams, and other steel construction materials that don't require super precise shapes.
