intersektioner mellan kön, ålder och sexualitet inom dessa fält. This study is based on life course interviews with 20 LGBTQ identified people born between 1922 and 1950, 62-88 years old at the time of the interviews. Older LGBTQ identified people have experienced tremendous changes in how gender identities and sexualities have been renegotiated during their lifetimes. Even though there is a small but growing field of LGBTQ ageing studies, queer studies rarely problematizes age or ageing. At the same time, the gerontological field often assumes heterosexuality and cisgender experiences. This dissertation uses a life course perspective and focuses on queer lines, life courses that move beyond the heteronormative expectations of how one should live one's life in relation to gender identity and/or sexuality. The overarching aim of the study is to explore experiences and meanings of living and ageing as LGBTQ in a changing heteronormative world. Thematic analysis is used to analyse and interpret the empirical material. The theoretical framework in this study refers to critical gerontology, feminist theory and queer theory. The analysis points to how experiences of gender identity and sexuality relate to historical and geographical contexts and change over time. It illustrates how gender, age and sexuality intersect with heteronormative expectations of what a life is supposed to be like. To not live up to these expectations by not adjusting to binary gender norms or not getting married and having children may have large social as well as material consequences. These include having to hide one's gender identity or sexuality, being socially repudiated and discriminated against or being subject to physical violence. Despite these conditions, the interviewees have oriented toward other lines, other ways of living where there is room for their gender identities and sexualities. The interviews point to the significance of social relations, networks and LGBTQ communities. LGBTQ groups and meeting places that have been created over time have facilitated in finding these other lines. Most of the narratives on ageing are similar to those of other people the same age, but there are also narratives that are specific to LGBTQ experiences. For some, the ageing body has ruled out the possibility of undergoing transgender specific surgeries. Others are worried about encountering homophobic or transphobic treatment when in need of care. The results point to the importance of including critical approaches of gender and sexuality within gerontology and life course studies and to including materiality when theorizing the ageing body. The dissertation also constitutes a theoretical bridge between gerontology, feminist theory and queer theory and contributes to more complex understandings of intersections between age, gender and sexuality to these fields.

 Sandberg,2011-04-08 This thesis focuses on the intersections of masculinity old age and sexuality from the perspectives of old men themselves how they understand and experience sex and sexuality in later life The study uses qualitative in depth interviews and body diaries an exploratory method that asked men write about their bodies in everyday life Twenty two men born between 1922 and 1942 participated in the study The aim of the thesis is two fold firstly to study sexual subjectivities of old men how old men articulate and make meaning around sexuality in later life Secondly the study aims to explore theoretically what a male body may become in relation to ageing in what ways the ageing male body could be a site for rethinking masculinity and the male body This aim was inspired by feminist theories in dialogue with the deleuzian concept becoming Similarly to gender age is understood to take shape and become intelligible in social and cultural contexts Furthermore the thesis stresses the significance of the specificities of the ageing body to the shaping of masculinity sexuality and subjectivity The body is therefore discussed as an open materiality beyond the binaries of culture and nature materiality This thesis discusses the concepts intimacy and touch as central to how old men s sexual subjectivities take shape allowing for alternative conceptualisations of sexuality beyond erection and intercourse Intimacy and touch are understood and discussed in several different ways By orienting themselves to touch and intimacy the old men emerged as more mature unselfish and with more serene sexual desires This also involved them distancing themselves from the younger man other men whom they perceived as more selfish inconsiderate and with stronger sexual desires Intimacy and touch could in this respect be understood as resources for shaping desirable heterosexual masculinity An orientation to intimacy and touch enabled old men to appear as neither asexual nor as dirty old men But the study also suggests that a turn to intimacy and touch may open up possibilities for rethinking and reconfiguring sexuality masculinity and the male body The ageing body then need not be understood as an obstacle but as an enabling site that provides opportunities for intimacy and touch Moreover the thesis presents affirmative old age as an alternative conceptualisation of old age beyond both the discourses of successful ageing and the discourses of old age as negativity and decline As a theory of difference and bodily specificity affirmative old age may be of interest for further feminist theorising
