Mandela : en biografi Anthony Sampson, 2013-12-16 Historien om Nelson Mandelas liv och verk r en av de stora berättelserna under 1900 talet och en av de mest hoppingivande Den brittiske journalisten och författaren Anthony Sampson har följt Mandela mellan ren 1951 och 2000 Han har också haft fri tillgång till Mandelas privata papper från författartiden på Robben Island Sampsons bok sprider nytt ljus över de moraliska dilemman och personliga val som Nelson Mandela tvingades till både i sitt privata och offentliga liv Den delar inte Mandelas egna tillkortakommanden men visar det pris han fick betala i sin kamp mot apartheid att leva skild från dem han älskade Nelson Mandela 1918-2013 tilldelades Nobels fredspris 1993 Current

Queera livslopp Anna Siverskog, 2016-11-16 Den här avhandlingen tar sin utgångspunkt i äldre lhbtq personers livsberättelser för att undersöka erfarenheter och betydelser av att leva och ldas som lesbisk homosexuell bisexuell transperson eller queer äldre lhbtq personer har levt och ldats i tider där könsidentiteter och sexualiteter som gör påverkan med heteronormativiteten har varit kriminaliserade patologiserade och många gånger framställt som avvikande Samtidigt r äldre lhbtq personers erfarenheter förbisedda inom forskningen där gerontologin ofta utgår från heteronormativa antaganden samtidigt som lhbtq forskningen sällan fokuserar på äldre eller h glder Avhandlingen bygger på livsberättelseintervjuer med

tjugo personer födda mellan 1922 och 1950 62-88 år vid tiden för intervjuerna Det empiriska materialet har analyserats och tolkats med tematisk analys som metod samt med ett teoretiskt ramverk bestående av kritisk gerontologi feministisk teori samt queerteori Analysen pekar mot hur personernas erfarenheter relaterar till tidsanda och rumsliga kontexter Den visar hur kön och sexualitet formas samman i heteronormativa förhållningar kring hur livet ska se ut Att avvika från dessa normer genom att inte leva upp till binära konventioner eller inte ingå i heterosexuella kontakter och skaffa barn kan ge stora sociala och materiella konsekvenser under livet Det kan handla om att behöva smygaktas bli socialt förskjutet diskriminerat eller utsatt för våld Trots dessa förhållningar visar analysen hur personerna orienterat sig mot andra sätt att leva där ens könshänförelse och sexualitet kan förändras Berättelserna pekar mot de betydelser som relationer sociala nätverk samt lhbtq-sammanhang haft för olika grupper förhållningar och tillstånd som skapats över tid gjort det möjligt att finna andra livsmönster Berättelserna om att lära sig minner i stor utsträckning om andras erfarenheter av äldre män blir i många avseenden specifika för lhbtq-personer Det kan handla om att inse att en äldre kropp stannar för den transvärlden och oro för att bli homo eller transfobiskt bemött inom äldreomsorgen Resultaten pekar mot vikten av att lyfta in kritiska förhållningssätt på kön och sexualitet i gerontologin och livsloppsstudier De visar också vikten av att inkludera materialitet i förhållanden av den äldre kroppen Avhandlingen bidrar till en historieskrivning av lhbtq-historia i en svensk kontext Den utgör också en teoretisk brygga mellan gerontologi feministisk teori samt queerteori och bidrar till mer komplexa förhållanden av intersektioner mellan kön äldre och sexualitet inom dessa fält

This study is based on life course interviews with 20 LGBTQ identified people born between 1922 and 1950 62-88 years old at the time of the interviews Older LGBTQ identified people have experienced tremendous changes in how gender identities and sexualities have been renegotiated during their lifetimes Even though there is a small but growing field of LGBTQ ageing studies queer studies rarely problematizes age or ageing At the same time the gerontological field often assumes heterosexuality and cis gender experiences This dissertation uses a life course perspective and focuses on queer lines life courses that move beyond the heteronormative expectations of how one should live one's life in relation to gender identity and or sexuality The overarching aim of the study is to explore experiences and meanings of living and ageing as LGBTQ in a changing heteronormative world Thematic analysis is used to analyse and interpret the empirical material The theoretical framework in this study refers to critical gerontology feminist theory and queer theory The analysis points to how experiences of gender identity and sexuality relate to historical and geographical contexts and change over time It illustrates how gender age and sexuality intersect with heteronormative expectations of what a life is supposed to be like To not live up to these expectations by not adjusting to binary gender norms or not getting married and having children may have large social as well as material consequences These include having to hide one's gender identity or sexuality being socially repudiated and discriminated against or being subject to physical violence Despite these conditions the interviewees have oriented toward other lines other ways of living where there is room for their gender identities and sexualities The interviews point to the significance of social relations networks and LGBTQ communities LGBTQ groups and meeting places that have been created over time have facilitated in finding these other lines Most of the narratives on ageing are similar to those of other people the same age but there are also narratives that are specific to LGBTQ experiences For some the ageing body has ruled out the possibility of undergoing transgender specific surgeries Others are worried about encountering homophobic or transphobic treatment when in need of care The results point to the importance of including critical approaches of gender and sexuality within gerontology and life course studies and to including materiality when theorizing the ageing body The dissertation also constitutes a theoretical bridge between gerontology feminist theory and queer theory and contributes to more complex understandings of intersections between age gender and sexuality to these fields
