Bartley,2019-11-26 This book assesses and evaluates the decision making behavior of United States presidents and their chief advisers from Roosevelt to Kennedy pertaining to China Seeking to dispel with the notion that each administration sought policy outcomes on the basis of a rational decision making model Bartley highlights the contradictions of adopted presidential decision making processes and the nature of domestic politics as playing prejudicial and debilitating roles The book demonstrates that elite decision making processes interacted with assumptions made about Chinese behavior interests and attitudes only superficially and in some cases not at all Misinformation and misperception were the natural outcomes Reinforced by the politics of McCarthyism at home intellectual debate on China policy was squashed parochialism and nuance were shunned and information was closed off Ultimately a divorce between the norm of behavior and the search for rational policy was registered in each administration The net result was a lasting and destructive cognitive dissonance to fit expectations of a China reality constructed information was ignored overlooked and distorted Offering new insights into the China policies of consecutive administrations from 1941 to 1963 this volume will be of great interest to scholars and students of American foreign policy security studies and international relations      Mutual Perceptions Of Long-range Goals Klaus Gottstein,2019-03-04 This book investigates perceptions including strategic normative and imagined perceptions of long range political goals both in the East and in the West discussing the arguments which are used to support each of these perceptions      Current Issues in Perceptual Training: Facing the Requirement to Couple Perception, Cognition, and Action in Complex Motor Behavior André Klostermann, David Mann, 2020-01-16      Revisiting the Yom Kippur War P.R. Kumaraswamy, 2013-01-11 Looking at the political military and intelligence components of the Yom Kippur War this work offers interpretations of Israel's conflict with the Arabs The contributors Israeli academics some involved in the war make a contribution to the understanding of this part of Israel's history      Modeling Individual Differences in Perceptual Decision Making Joseph W. Houpt, Cheng-Ta Yang, James T. Townsend, 2017-01-18 To deal with the abundant amount of information in the environment in order to achieve our goals human beings adopt a strategy to accumulate some information and filter out other information to ultimately make decisions Since the development of cognitive science in the 1960s researchers have been interested in understanding how human beings process and accumulate information for decision making Researchers have conducted extensive behavioral studies and applied a wide range of modeling tools to study human behavior in simple detection tasks and two choice decision tasks e.g. discrimination classification In general researchers often assume that the manner in which information is processed for decision making is invariant across individuals given a particular experimental context Independent variables including speed accuracy instructions stimulus properties i.e. intensity and characteristics of the participants i.e. aging cognitive ability are assumed to affect the parameters in a model i.e. speed of information accumulation response bias but not the way that participants process information e.g. the order of information processing Given these assumptions much modeling has been accomplished based on the grouped data rather than the individual data However a growing number of studies have demonstrated that there were individual differences in the perceptual decision process In the same task context different groups of the participants may process information in different manners The capacity and architecture of the decision mechanism were found to vary across individuals implying that humans decision strategies can vary depending on the context to maximize their performance In this special issue we focused on a particular subset of cognitive models particularly accumulator models multinomial processing trees and systems factorial technology SFT as applied to perceptual decision making The motivation for the focus on perceptual decision making is threefold Empirical studies of perception have grown out of a history of making a large number of observations for each individual so as to achieve precise estimates of each individual's performance This type of data rather than a small number of observations per individual is most amenable to achieving precision in individual level and group level cognitive modeling Second the interaction between the acquisition of perceptual information and the decisions based on that information to the extent that those processes are distinguishable offers rich data for scientific exploration Finally there is an increasing interest in the practical application of individual variation in perceptual ability whether to inform perceptual training and expertise or to guide personnel decisions Although these practical applications are beyond the scope of this issue we hope that the research presented herein may serve as the foundation for future endeavors in that domain

Planning and decision-making in human-wildlife conflict and coexistence Silvio Marchini, Alexandra Zimmermann, Katia Maria P. M. B. Ferraz, Jenny Anne Glikman, 2023-03-27      Perception Gaps between Headquarters and Subsidiary Managers Andrea Daniel, 2010-02-24 Andrea Daniel not only compares headquarters and subsidiary managers perceptions of a subsidiary's role but she analyzes the implications of perception gaps for the headquarters subsidiary relationship
