IMPORTANT NOTES

- As you prepare for study, an exam, or an interview – visualize the results that you want. Imagine how good it will feel when you receive that A, get that promotion....
- Get a good night's sleep, every night at least 7 hr, preferably 8 (teenagers need 9). A tired brain functions the same as when you are intoxicated.
- NEVER stay up late the night before an exam or major meeting.
- Get up at the same time every morning. It helps you stay more alert. Plan an extra 15 min in the morning for unexpected "slow-downs" so your mind remains calm. Use the extra time for learning if everything goes well.

- To become good at any of the skills or habits in this guide, it takes practice and clear effort. You will be rewarded for consistent investments of your time and effort.
- When struggling with a task or studying, read your purpose and goal statement.
- Projects become easier as you remember what effect they have on achieving your goals.
- All successful people share one vital quality – working hard to achieve specific goals. This skill can be learned with practice and commitment.
- Only written goals are likely to become realized.

Use the following space to begin creating your personal, professional and financial goals.

RECENT RESEARCH

- The herbal ingredient ginseng-A has been found to boost alertness, learning performance and also decreases dementia.
- Avoid even second hand smoke – even small amounts have been found to cause children's test scores to drop.
- Green tea has proven even more effective in improving memory. Remember to sleep for over 3 min, and "wash" the tea bag up and down.
- Occasionally switch hands when using your computer mouse to strengthen neural connections in the brain.
- Small sips of coffee (without sugar) throughout the day can keep you more alert.
- Talk with your hands, moving them helps you with recall.

CRITICAL FIRST STEPS SUMMARY

1. Eat healthily with emphasis on protein just before critical exams or concentration times.
2. Avoid sugars and starches before exams or times when a sharp brain is needed.
3. Drink plenty of water (at least one half your body weight in oz).
4. Take vitamin C and the B vitamins.
5. Take choline (as lecithin) or phosphatidyl serine supplements.
6. Relax, learn to relax, practice relaxation techniques, and study with relaxing music.
7. Practice the 3 deep breaths.
8. Use peppermint oil for focus and for learning and recall.
9. Exercise regularly, and sing while you are doing it.
10. Avoid the tans and saturated fats, eat plenty of omega-3's (such as fish oil).
