A common refrain heard from instructors in offices across the world is that students have a hard time producing quality written discourse. This is no different in the world of film studies where many undergraduate students struggle to cogently discuss the films they watch in class. How can film instructors help students become better writers? This book answers this question by first uncovering the disciplinary expectations we have for students and then offering strategies to explicitly teach those expectations in the classroom. This book examines and identifies the disciplinary conventions of professional film studies discourse along with the expectations we have for student writing in undergraduate film courses. What becomes clear from this analysis is that the pedagogical expectations we have for students are aligned with and shaped by professional writing in the discipline. It helps to uncover the argument types instructors take for granted and helps those teaching undergraduate students not only to know what those expectations are but also how to use that knowledge to foster better student writing.

Transforming Author Museums Ulrike Spring, Johan Schimanski, Thea Aarbakke, 2021-10-15 Literary museums today must respond to new challenges: the traditional image of the author's home museum as a sacred place of literary pilgrimage centered around a national hero has been questioned and literary museums have begun to develop new strategies centered not only on biography but also literary texts, imagined spaces, different readers, historical contexts, architectural concepts, and artistic interventions. As this volume shows, the changing of spaces asks how literary museums create new ways of interlinking real and literary spaces, texts, objects, readers, and tourists.

The Academic Writer's Toolkit Arthur Asa Berger, 2016-07 Berger's slim, user-friendly volume on academic writing is a gift to linguistically stressed academics. Author of 60 published books, the author speaks to junior scholars and graduate students about the process and products of academic writing. He differentiates between business writing skills for memos, proposals, and reports and the scholarly writing that occurs in journals and books. He has suggestions for getting the turgid out of turgid academic prose and offers suggestions on how to best structure various forms of documents for effective communication. Written in Berger's friendly, personal style, he shows by example that academics can write good, readable prose in a variety of genres.

The Sociology of the Professions Robert Dingwall, Philip Lewis, 2014-04-09 Robert Dingwall and Philip Lewis's renowned compilation of diverse studies written by internationally recognized theorists and empirical researchers into the sociology of the professions was groundbreaking when first published in 1983 and has influenced scholars, practitioners, and professionals since. Not limited to one occupation or field as are most such works, this collection examines across traditional fields the idea and practice of professions and professionals. The 2014 digital edition features a substantive new Foreword by Professor Sida Liu of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He notes that this book is a rare effort to fully compare the two classic cases of doctors and lawyers in the professions literature. The contributors of the book include a number of prominent authors on the professions in Britain and the United States. Until today, it remains a vitally important volume for scholars and students interested in various aspects of professional life. Looking back, Liu adds, one must be struck by the extent to which theorists of professions and empirical researchers on doctors and lawyers from both the UK and US fully engage with one another throughout the book. He concludes that the reemergence of this excellent book three decades after its initial publication will reconfirm its status as a classic collection of essays on the professions. The Sociology of the Professions brings together enduring work by some of the most influential writers on the sociology of the professions. It is a deliberate attempt to extend the theoretical basis of the specialty by a comparative approach using data and interviews on medicine and law. Recognized advances in understanding the professions resulted from the work of medical sociologists on the division of labor in health care and on the relation between health services and society. Their foundation though appeared uncertain in the absence of comparable material on other sectors. At the same time the sociology of law has tended to neglect the study of the profession in favor of the analysis of statutes and their effects. But law is not just what is written in legislation; it is people's work. Our understanding of the social organization of legal services is incomplete without that perspective. The contributors to this volume are recognized authorities from a variety of fields from the UK and US. They include Dingwall and Lewis as well as Paul Atkinson, Maureen Cain, John Eekelaar, Eliot Freidson, Marc Galanter, Gordon Horobin, Malcolm Johnson, Geoff Mungham, Topsy Murray, Alan Paterson, Dietrich Rueschemeyer, P. M. Strong, and Philip Thomas. Their studies fall into three categories: Professions, Knowledge and Power, Professional Work, and Professional Careers. The volume retains a comprehensive bibliography of relevant British and US sources on the study of the professions in law, medicine, and beyond. Reviews of the original edition include Dingwall and Lewis have provided an exemplar of what an edited volume can be. Its comparativism, its span of European and American scholarship, its internal debates, its efforts to press into new theoretical terrain, all add to a refreshing and challenging collection. In fact, this volume would be a far better entree to the enduring questions of professions in modern societies than the limp alternatives too frequently served in its place. Terence Halliday in Social Forces. This anthology provides an exceptionally literate assessment of past research and a coherent statement of the research agenda for the future. Eve Spangler in Contemporary Sociology. There is a sense of excitement as many of the contributors attempt to mark out new subjects for future research or try out new strategies of investigation and invite the reader or reviewer to participate in their debates. Michael Burrage in Modern Law Review. Also available in new paperback edition.

Professional Academic writing in Global Context Theresa Lillis, Mary Jane Curry, 2010-04-30. Academic Writing in a Global Context addresses the issue of the pressure on academics worldwide to produce their work in English in scholarly publishing and why the growth of the use of academic English matters. Drawing on an eight-year text ethnographic study of the experiences of fifty scholars working in Europe, this book discusses these questions at both a macro and micro level through discussions of knowledge evaluation systems on all levels and analysis of the progress of a text towards publication. In addition to this, case studies of individual scholars in their local institutions and countries are used to illustrate experiences of using English in the academic world. Academic Writing in a Global Context examines the impact of the growing dominance of English on academic writing for publication globally The authors explore the ways in which the global status attributed to English is impacting on the lives and practices of multilingual scholars working in contexts where English is not the official language of communication and throws into relief the politics surrounding academic publishing This book will be of interest to postgraduates and professionals in the fields of World Englishes language and globalization and English Language Teaching
