

SCHOOL EFFECTIVENESS RESEARCH: ITS MESSAGES FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT

Sheila Riddell and Sally Brown (editors) (HMSO for SOED, 1991), pp. vi + 77, £6.75

In the past fifteen years we have learned a lot about the correlates of effective schooling and have achieved a better understanding of the questions and values we invoke when judging the work of teachers and schools. But two other tasks have proved more difficult. One is to produce plausible explanations of how schools achieve, maintain or lose effectiveness. The other is to apply the knowledge we have, whether as researchers or practitioners, to the task of school improvement.

During this time, the world has not waited for our answers. Two changes of particular significance have occurred. First, the task of judging and improving schools has been laicised, taken away from teachers, education authorities and academics and handed over to parents, consumers and markets. Second, central government has sought both to regulate these markets and to maintain a form of accountability by creating a framework of quality assurance that relies heavily on indicators of performance. Public administration has been retooled with methods borrowed from research, but research itself has been subjected to greater controls and opened up to private-sector markets.

These changes are reflected in the character of this volume. It was commissioned by HMI who also asked the University of Stirling, where Sally Brown is a Professor of Education, to organise a companion conference on the effectiveness of schooling (see Eric Drever 'School Effectiveness: Criteria and Evidence', Spotlight 31, Scottish Council for Research in Education, 1991). The Riddell and Brown volume is just one of a multi-volume range of resources provided by SOED. Other volumes include those on relative ratings, standard examination tables, and indicators of ethos and effectiveness, volumes in which, incidentally, the authorship of the volume reviewed here is attributed to SOED itself.

Riddell and Brown have aimed the book at practitioners and especially at local authorities. It attempts, they write, to '... make the link between the practical efforts of local authorities or schools to improve their educational provision, and the research findings about the characteristics of effective schools and strategies for school improvements' (p. 1, editors' emphases).

Up to a point, the volume succeeds. The chapters are clear and accessible, and offer concise summaries of the research fields that interest their authors. Peter Mortimore and David Reynolds respectively describe findings on effectiveness at the primary- and secondary-school stages. Gray and colleagues evaluate the early attempts of education authorities in England and Wales to incorporate indicators of school performance in their advisory and inspectorial functions. Then two chapters, by Louise Stoll and David Hopkins, discuss the strategies for improvement that are open to local authorities and individual schools. In a final chapter, the editors

Creemers, Ton Peters, David Reynolds, 2022-02-26 School effectiveness and school improvement have different origins School effectiveness is more directed to finding out what works in education and why school improvement is practice and policy oriented and intended to change education in the desired direction However in their orientation to outcomes input processes and context in education they also have much in common In the theoretical part different orientations have been analysed and combined in a model for effective school improvement Based on this analysis an evaluation framework was developed for the analysis of the case studies of school improvement projects in the participating countries The theoretical model and the results of the analyses of the case studies were combined in a framework of effective school improvement Making Good Schools Robert Bollen, Bert P.M. Creemers, David Hopkins, Nijs Lagerweij, David Reynolds, Louise Stoll, 2005-06-21 The disciplines of school effectiveness research and school improvement practice and research have been apart for too long This book is the first major attempt by leading writers and practitioners in these fields to bring the areas together in a coherent way Existing knowledge about the characteristics of good schools is outlined together with the knowledge base about how to make schools good schools The book also makes an entirely original contribution to re thinking practice in school improvement that can revolutionise our thinking in the late 1990s and which can be of use to academics to policymakers and to the practitioners which much existing work has neglected Perspectives on School Effectiveness and School Improvement Michael Barber, Louise Stoll, 1997 This collection of papers presents the debate between supporters and critics of the school effectiveness movement School effectiveness research explores the different contributions schools make to pupils learning and the factors that make some schools more successful than others Politically influential helping to shape the education policies of the two main parties it has also been used at a practical level to generate programmes and policies for school improvement Members of the Institute of Education's School Effectiveness and Improvement Centre ISEIC which leads the field in research in this area contribute papers to this volume that both describe the research and reply to criticisms of it while other contributors from both within and outside the Institute provide philosophical sociological and cross cultural critiques which are challenged in an Endpiece by Peter Mortimore and Pam Sammons

School Effectiveness and Improvement Research, Policy and Practice Christopher Chapman, Paul Armstrong, Alma Harris, Daniel Muijs, David Reynolds, Pam Sammons, 2012-03-12 This book provides a contemporary overview of school effectiveness and improvement It charts the development theory and research in this area and looks at the contribution made to policy and practice It also challenges some assumptions that have become ingrained into the theoretical and methodological traditions of the field By challenging these orthodoxies it provides a framework that sets a new agenda and repositions the field to meet the emerging challenges of the twenty first century It argues that traditional measures of school effectiveness are challenged as systems have attempted to adapt to a complex range of emerging agendas New theoretical perspectives are required which consider education and a broader set of outcomes This shift requires a rethink of how effectiveness and improvement have been understood by the field and a reconstruction by policy makers and practitioners Attention must be given to promoting equity as well as effectiveness so that one school or student's gain no longer means another's loss The field must develop new methodologies if inequities are to be challenged and a broader set of outcome measures are to be developed The two questions guiding this book are How can educational effectiveness and improvement research and practice support the development of a more equitable education service What are the key indicators of educational effectiveness and improvement and what are the new methodologies required to facilitate a shift from school effectiveness and improvement to educational effectiveness and improvement This book uses lenses of research policy and practice to explore these key questions and articulate what such a repositioning may look like and how it may be achieved It will prove invaluable for teachers school leaders and anyone involved in policy and educational research

School Effectiveness, School Improvement David Reynolds, 2004-11-01 The pressure on schools to improve and to raise achievement continues to be a dominant issue in both school and government policies School Effectiveness and School Improvement seeks to develop the debate further providing academics and practitioners alike with a summary and discussion of research on school effectiveness and school improvement up to the present new perspectives on these fields developed from other traditions of thinking and research a consideration of the role of organization theory an integrated view of these current perspectives and clear practical implications for policy and practice

Advances in School Effectiveness Research and Practice D. Reynolds, B. Creemers, P.S. Nesselrodt, E.C. Shaffer, S. Stringfield, C. Teddlie, 2014-06-28 Advances in School Effectiveness Research and Practice presents a worldwide state of the art summary of the rapidly growing field of school effectiveness research by an internationally renowned group of authors Current knowledge in the field is reviewed to present

Creemers, Leonidas Kyriakides, 2013-07-03 Improving Quality in Education is a major contribution to the area of school improvement setting out a dynamic framework that will help schools collect data evaluate themselves decide on priorities for improvement and develop action plans

Schools Making a Difference Martin Thrupp, 1999-05-16 Does an effective school really come about through the actions of teachers and school leaders or does it also require an advantaged student intake This question reflects a longstanding research debate about whether or not the social class mix of a school's student intake has much effect on individual achievement Schools Making a Difference Let's Be Realistic presents new evidence which suggests that school mix is likely to be important because of the way many school processes are deeply influenced by student intake characteristics Low socioeconomic schools face numerous intake related constraints which make them highly resistant to improvement efforts By suggesting that failing schools are often overwhelmed rather than ineffective this book provides a sympathetic reappraisal of the performance of teachers and school leaders in such schools It also offers a critical response to the often unrealistic claims of the school effectiveness and school improvement movement and a fresh critique of market reforms in education

Creating Equity and Quality Terrence Wendel, Society for the Advancement of Excellence in Education, 2000 This monograph is the first in a series of reports related to the Successful Secondary Schools Study in three Canadian provinces a

School Effectiveness for Whom? Roger Slee,Sally Tomlinson,Gaby Weiner,2003-05-20 School effectiveness research together with what is now described as the school improvement movement Barber 1996 has captured both the Conservative and New Labour imaginations as a basis for educational planning and policy making in the UK Internationally school effectiveness enjoys and expanding and enthusiastic audience This book provides a critique of this research genre particularly in the light of the recent calls for teaching to go back to the basics The editors argue that this school effectiveness research is simplistic in its analysis of educational problems Far from getting to the bottom of the problem of failing students and schools they argue these movements are merely scratching at the surface of the problems and coming up with notions for superficial improvements The Practice and Theory of School Improvement David Hopkins, 2008-05-13
