Excerpt from A Handbook of Greek Archaeology This manual is intended primarily for the use of students who expect to pursue the study of Greek Archaeology seriously but it may also be of use to those who desire only a general knowledge of the subject Neither the serious student at the beginning of his course of study nor the general reader should be disturbed by a discussion of conflicting theories Matters concerning which some degree of certainty has not been attained have therefore been in great measure omitted The attempt has been made to avoid a very detailed treatment of the subject matter though in the discussion of technical processes especially those of architecture it was necessary to include a good many details chiefly because a knowledge of them is needful to the student and is not easily accessible Few entire categories of works of art have like the carvings in ivory been completely omitted though some e g terracotta reliefs have been treated very briefly since the size of the book was limited In the chapter on Vases footnotes have been used more freely than elsewhere owing to the fact that the material for illustration and detailed study is scattered and not always easily found The chapter on Architecture is the work of Mr Gorham Phillips Stevens formerly for two years Fellow in Architecture at the American School of Classical Studies at Athens on the grant of the Carnegie Institution Its historical and descriptive parts are based largely on portions of Borrmann's Die Baukunst des Altertums und des Islam im Mittelalter and the chapter has been revised by Mr Fowler The chapters on Vases and Painting are by Mr Wheeler and he has supervised the preparation of the illustrations About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Excerpt from A Manual of Greek Archaeology Modern culture owes to the civilisation of the ancient Greeks a profound debt which is at once direct and indirect The direct debt has arisen principally from the place long held by Greek studies in our system of education The indirect debt which is more subtle and less easily recognised is that of many forces inspirations and models in art literature and science that have been transmitted to us from a remote past through various peoples and through diverse civilisations In our schools and to a certain extent still in our colleges and universities we understand by Greek studies almost exclusively the study of the language and literature of the ancient Hellenes But the Hellenic spirit and it is this only that gives life to these studies has revealed itself in a novel and distinctly different manner and with equal if not with greater vividness delicacy and force in the manifold remains of Greek art from the rudest specimens of the potter s industry up to the glorious monuments due to the genius of the sculptor and architect in the service of religion About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
