A Psychoethnological Study of Cultural Deprivation David Paul Ausubel,1965 Maori Youth David Paul Ausubel,1961 In this study Professor Ausubel has given himself a three fold task He has set out to make a careful investigation of the educational and vocational aspirations of two groups of Maori youth an urban and a rural or semi rural group and to compare these aspirations with those of a pakeha European control group Secondly he has used his qualitative data to show the significance of his quantitative material for an understanding of the place of Maori youth in contemporary New Zealand society Finally Dr Ausubel interprets his results with reference on the one hand to recent historical development of Maori society and on the other hand to a psychological theory of the development of Maori personality Foreword Maori and the State Richard S. Hill,2010-04-01 Presenting the most recent research and written by an expert in the field this examination explores the principal interrelationships between the British Crown and the Maori people in the 1950s and 1960s when Crown assimilation policies intensified and during the 1970s when the pressure of the Maori renaissance encouraged policies and goals based on biculturalism A subject central to New Zealand s culture this is an important and historical analysis of the country and the wider issue of indigenous peoples rights Youth in a Changing World Estelle Fuchs,2011-06-03 No detailed description available for Youth in a Changing World Mai I Rangiatea Pania Te Whāiti,Mārie Barbara McCarthy,Arohia Durie,1997 Mai i Rangiatea provides some Maori perceptions of healthy growth and development It introduces a Maori developmental discourse which affirms a cultural base with an affinity to the discourses of other indigenous peoples Western concepts of human development have oversimplified the process by emphasizing individuality as the core then generalizing to the whole Maori acknowledgment of the interdependency between the individual and the group gives some basis for alternative discourses State Authority, Indigenous Autonomy Richard S.
