

Māori Creation Story

In the beginning of time there was nothing on earth, sea or sky, just Te Pō, darkness. In the Te Pō there were two beings, Hāpū and Hūi. Hāpū and Hūi decided the earth would come to be. They lay together in a tight embrace. Together, they had many children who were all male. The sons lived below them in the darkness.

These sons are all in the past and have magical powers. They explain Māori beliefs about the creation of the universe and the origins of gods and of man. Hāpū created the weather, the stars and the moon, the fish, and the birds are all found in Hāpū's realm.

As the children grew up, they wondered what it would be like to live in the light. Tāwhiri, the youngest of all the sons, decided to be a brother. "Let's tell them!" The brothers disagreed. Tāwhiri, the god of the forests and birds, had a different idea. "We will push them apart. Hāpū will be in the sky above us and Hūi will stay below us in the darkness then."

He is the weather and he is the sky. They are all in the sky! Please don't be angry, and thank you very much.

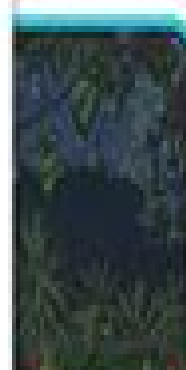

He is the weather and he is the sky. They are all in the sky! Please don't be angry, and thank you very much.

He is the weather and he is the sky. They are all in the sky! Please don't be angry, and thank you very much.

He is the weather and he is the sky. They are all in the sky! Please don't be angry, and thank you very much.

He is the weather and he is the sky. They are all in the sky! Please don't be angry, and thank you very much.
