Promoting Wellness and Resiliency in Correctional Officers Hayden P. Smith, 2022-12-26 Correctional officers face considerable stress risk and danger that lead to poor physical and mental health outcomes In fact their life expectancy is 15 years shorter than the national average Public perception and media portrayals of correctional officers tend to reinforce stereotypes of brutish improper and uncontrolled behavior Yet the reality is that correctional officers are operating a default public and mental health system for a sizeable portion of our society a responsibility that exposes them to considerable risk These negative effects have been compounded by an international staffing crisis that has made our jails and prisons far less safe for working officers To address this situation this book features an examination of a combined 11 313 correctional officers and 42 of their family members in the United States Canada and Europe It explores proactive strategies that can reduce rates of posttraumatic stress disorder PTSD in correctional officers which currently surpasses those found in returning military veterans who experienced combat It then delves into the dynamics of correctional officer suicide featuring the perspectives of their families This book highlights innovative approaches that can build on existing strengths including the role of international exchange programs It presents universal themes that impact the safety wellbeing and resiliency of correctional officers along with positive outcomes related to evidence based programs that maximize health in the correctional workplace This book will be of interest to researchers and advanced students of criminology mental health public policy social work and sociology The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal Criminal Justice Studies

Resources in Education ,1992-04 Corrections in Canada John W. Ekstedt,Curt T. Griffiths,2013-10-22 Corrections in Canada Policy and Practice Second Edition examines the Canadian correctional policy and practice The book is comprised of 11 chapters that tackle a specific area of concern The first chapter provides an introductory discourse about the Canadian correctional system The next chapter discusses the history of Canadian Correction Chapter 3 covers the Canadian correctional enterprise and Chapter 4 talks about policymaking in Canadian corrections The book also tackles correctional planning and deals with the structures of management and administration in corrections The correctional treatment programs and the delivery of correctional treatment are also explained The book then covers the community based corrections The last two chapters discuss correctional reform and the future of correction in Canada The book will be of use to individuals interested in the Canadian correctional system as well as to those involved in the development of any correctional systems

What Works (and Doesn't) in Reducing Recidivism Edward J. Latessa,Shelley L. Johnson,Deborah Koetzle,2020-06-08 What Works and Doesn't in Reducing Recidivism offers criminologists and students an evidence based discussion of the latest trends in corrections Experts Latessa Johnson and Koetzle translate the research and findings about what works and doesn't work in reducing recidivism into understandable concepts and terms presenting them in a way that illustrates the value of research to practice Over the last several decades research has clearly shown that rehabilitation efforts can be effective in reducing recidivism among criminal offenders but it is clear that treatment is not a one size fits all approach Offenders vary by gender age crime type and or addictions to name but a few ways and these individual needs must be addressed by providers Finally issues such as leadership quality of staff and evaluation efforts affect the quality and delivery of treatment services While other texts have addressed issues regarding treatment in corrections this text is unique in that it not only discusses the research on what works but also addresses the implementation issues faced as practitioners move from theory to practice as well as the importance of staff leadership and evaluation efforts This book synthesizes the vast research for the student interested in correctional rehabilitation as well as for the practitioner working with offenders
