Abstract: The perception that teachers have of cultural diversity is essential when it comes to the educational attention given to immigrant students. The objective is to determine how teachers perceive students' cultural diversity and families' commitment with the education of their children, and if this perception can influence teachers' expectations regarding students and their families. This is qualitative research study based on hermeneutic phenomenology developed through semi-structured interviews, applied on an intentional sample of 16 Spanish primary school teachers. The results indicate that teachers need the assistance of educational specialists, training in cultural diversity, and intercultural communication skills. They also recognize the importance of enhancing collaboration with immigrant families. Hence, education must be rethought, bearing in mind the perceptions of teachers, empowering students and their families with new innovative formulas aimed at incorporating their cultural references in the curriculum, and providing culturally relevant teaching.

Keywords: teacher perception; immigrant student integration; immigrant families–school collaboration; cultural diversity; culturally relevant teaching

1. Introduction

Present-day society, and more specifically the educational system, requires a change that accommodates all students, in which there is no exclusion and where diversity is understood not as a problem but as a learning opportunity [1–5]. This learning allows both immigrant and autochthonous students to enrich their culture by exchanging and incorporating new cultural elements, values, and attitudes while eliminating prejudices and encouraging situations of intercultural coexistence [6–10]. For this to be successful, not only does it depend on the teachers and students, but the participation of their families is also paramount [11,12]. On certain occasions, the perceptions of teachers towards immigrant students and immigrant families' perceptions of education become an obstacle. Therefore, we have set ourselves the objective of determining how centres, and more specifically teachers, perceive the cultural diversity of the students in their classrooms, and if this perception can influence the expectations of the teaching staff regarding immigrant students, and in the case of immigrant families, if the teachers perceive them as facilitators who are committed to the education of their children. This research can help fight inequality and injustice in the education field. It is exactly related to sustainable development objectives 4 and 10, since we intend to improve teacher training to guarantee inclusive, equitable, and quality education and promote learning opportunities, in addition to reducing educational inequalities of the most vulnerable populations, in this case immigrant students and their families in Spanish schools.

In a study, it was concluded that teachers' expectations influence student achievement, and these expectations were different depending on the student's ethnic group [13]. In another study with Latino students residing in the USA, it was evident that the teachers perceived the students' use of their mother tongue to communicate with one another

Perceptions of the Holocaust in Europe and Muslim Communities Günther Jikeli, Joëlle

Allouche-Benayoun, 2012-11-08 The way people think about the Holocaust is changing The particular nature of the transformation depends on people s historical perspectives and how they position themselves and their nation or community vis vis the tragedy Understandably European Muslims perceive the Holocaust as less central to their history than do other Europeans Yet while the acknowledgement and commemoration of the horrors of the Holocaust are increasingly important in Europe Holocaust denial and biased views on the Holocaust are widespread in European Muslims countries of origin In this book a number of distinguished scholars and educators of various backgrounds discuss views of the Holocaust Problematic views are often influenced by a persistent attitude of Holocaust denial which is derived in part from discourses in the Muslim communities in their countries of origin The essays collected here explore the backgrounds of these perceptions and highlight positive approaches and developments Many of the contributions were written by people working in the field and reflecting on their experiences This collection also reveals that problematic views of the Holocaust are not limited to Muslim communities

Migration in the Mediterranean Elena Ambrosetti,Donatella Strangio,Catherine Wihtol de Wenden,2016-05-26 Migration in the Mediterranean region is a widely debated and much studied topic This is due to the present refugee crisis consequences of Arab revolutions the proximity with emigration and transit countries but also to the involvement of southern European countries and the mass arrival of migrants The management of Border controls migration development human trafficking human rights and the clash or convergence of civilizations has generated a great deal of controversy and media attention Migration in the Mediterranean offers a unique multidisciplinary theoretical and methodological framework bringing together scholars from different subject areas This book aims to address the following research questions What are the main characteristics of migration movements in this region What are the most important theoretical challenges What are the perspectives for the future This book begins with an overview of the economic perspective of the Mediterranean migration model with a particular focus on labour market outcomes of migrants. It then presents the original results of field studies on the unintended effects of the EU's external border controls on migration and integration in the Euro-Mediterranean region before addressing the themes of mobility, migration and transnationalism. This volume focuses on migration with a multidisciplinary approach with scholars from various areas including sociology, economics, geography, political science and history. This book is well suited for those who study international economics, migration and political sociology.

Immigrant Entrepreneurship Tamaralaiyefa

Tiemo, 2025-09-25. Analysing immigration around the world. Immigrant Entrepreneurship: Opportunities, Ventures and Outcomes in a Global Market illuminates how immigrant entrepreneurs overcome barriers to mobilise resources across diverse socio-economic environments. Drawing on case studies from Africa, the Americas, Europe, the Middle East and elsewhere, the author explores how contemporary migration patterns, informal economies and digitalisation influence entrepreneurial outcomes. In emphasising entrepreneurial strategies that help adapt to exclusion and regulatory complexity, this book provides a nuanced understanding of the entire field of immigrant entrepreneurship. The global comparative approach taken by this book sheds light on the vital role that immigration plays in driving entrepreneurial growth in economic development around the world. The result is a resource that is enlightening reading for researchers and advanced students of entrepreneurship, international business and development studies.

Governing Migration for Development from the Global Souths, 2022-09-12

The 14th thematic volume of International Development Policy provides perspectives through case studies from the global Souths focusing on the challenges and opportunities of governing migration on the subnational, national, regional and international levels. Bringing together some thirty authors from Africa, Latin America and Asia, the book explores existing and new policies and frameworks in terms of their successes and best practices and looks at them through the lens of additional challenges such as those brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic, the rise of nationalisms and an increase in xenophobia. The chapters also take the 5 Ps approach to sustainable development: people, planet, prosperity, peace and partnerships, and assess how migration policies serve sustainable development in a rapidly evolving context.
