Dryden,1989-12-06 How hard it is to find a book to recommend to trainees which will give them an insight into what counselling and psychotherapy too for that matter is really like This book does exactly that This is a book which would be equally useful to the humanistic practitioner and the more orthodox one The breadth of sympathy is admirable in dealing with what is common to all orientations This is one of those rare books which does justice both to the human experiences involved in counselling and psychotherapy and to the theory which might explain those experiences Changes What is the experience of counselling from the perspectives of both client and counsellor What can be learned for the practice of counselling from an understanding of how it feels to be a client or a counsellor Addressing these questions central to this book are the personal accounts of individual clients and counsellors who each relate their own very different experiences of counselling They explore such issues as identity expectations trust power and boundaries in the client counsellor relationship And each examines the intense personal meanings of success or failure in the client or counsellor role An analysis of the implications for the counselling relationship concludes the volume Person-centred Counselling in Action ,1988

Person-Centred Counselling in Action Dave Mearns, Brian Thorne, 1988-10. This practical and comprehensive guide is written for counsellor trainers and their trainees as well as for counsellors already in practice wanting to familiarize themselves with the person centred approach to counselling. Dave Mearns and Brian Thorne explain the theoretical principles of the person centred approach by relating these principles to actual practice. Drawing on one particular case study, the two counsellors present an extensive exploration of the core conditions of empathy, acceptance and congruence and provide a step by step account of both the counsellors and the clients' experience of being involved in a trusting, caring relationship characterised by power sharing and mutuality.
