

1. Retrenchment: the process of rolling back or cutting social welfare policies. It is caused by many reasons, some being ideology globalization, theories of expansion and population shifts.
2. Ikumen: Japanese men who take an active role in raising their childrens' lives, incentivised by government attempts to alter traditional societal gender roles.
3. Male Breadwinner Model: This is a system in which men go into the workforce and make money for the household. Women are decommodified from the market and are responsible for unpaid work such as raising children and domestic housework. This system puts women at risk in relationship breakdowns due to risk of poverty or financial insecurity.
4. Complementary Approach:the process of after globalization centres rewarded and assisted their population to make up for the losses of globalization.
5. Race to the Bottom Hypothesis: This hypothesis theorizes that competitive economic globalization will lead to cutting the costs of production and cutting workers' rights in order to increase capital gains and increase a country's influence on the market. Race to the bottom policies display how globalization can produce smaller welfare regimes as the associated competitiveness leads to lowering wages and countries racing to provide the least benefits.
6. Parental Leave: A prolonged leave of absence from an occupation typically to raise children. Many systems pay a chunk of the salary by law.
7. Fertility Rate: A designator of how many children are produced by one woman. Lower rates are associated with an increasing aging population, making the provision of pensions more difficult for a welfare state
8. Democratization: The process of changing from a non democratic system into a democratic system such as authoritarian into democracy
9. Electoral Competition: Kinda self-explanatory
10. Post-Communist Regime: Went through double transition of communism -> capitalism and authoritarianism -> democracy and thus have a history of universal policy.
 - a. A system which has high government involvement as well as a dual breadwinner model and dualism. Is a system that's like a combination of conservative and Social democratic systems.
11. Mediterranean Regime: A pseudo-conservative regime that had a massive informal sector and small formal sector. This system has high decodification and high stratusfaction. One major defining feature is dualism
