AB Bookman's Weekly ,1997 The Literature of Reconstruction Brook Thomas,2017-01-17 In this groundbreaking new study author Brook Thomas argues that literary analysis can enhance our historical understanding of race and Reconstruction The standard view that Reconstruction ended with the Compromise of 1877 is a retrospective construction Works of literature provide the perspective of those who continued to see possibilities for its renewal well past 1877 Historians have long tried to reconcile social history s emphasis on the local with political history s emphasis on the national Literature creates national political allegories while focusing on events in a particular locale Moreover the debate over Reconstruction was a debate about state legitimacy as well as specific laws It was a question of foundational myths as well as foundational legal principles Literature s political allegories allow us to recreate those debates rather than view the end of Reconstruction as a foregone conclusion Because many of the issues raised by Reconstruction remain unresolved those debates continue into the present Chapters treat how the racial issues raised by Reconstruction are interwoven with debates over state v national authority efforts to combat terrorism the KKK the paternalism of welfare economic expansion and the question of who should rightly inherit the nation s past Thomas examines authors who opposed Reconstruction authors who supported it and authors who struggled with mixed feelings This exciting text will set the standard in literary historical studies for decades to come The National Union Catalogs, 1963- ,1964 Adult Catalog: Authors Los Angeles County Public Library,1970 Cell Signaling Mediating Critical Radiation Responses Carsten Herskind,Mary Helen Barcellos-Hoff,2021-07-08 The Grove Encyclopedia of American Art Joan M. Deep Subsurface Microbiology and Energetics Alberto Robador, James Andrew Bradley, William J. Brazelton, 2025-05-27

The role of deeply buried microbes is far more important than has been previously presumed Comprehensive studies of deep subsurface microbiology have revealed not only cell abundances that match previous estimates in surface environments but most importantly have demonstrated the viability of these microbes and their essential roles in operating and maintaining global biogeochemical cycles The deep subsurface biosphere refers to the vast ecosystems of microorganisms that exist within marine subseafloor sediments and the oceanic crust as well as continental subterranean environments They are estimated to contain a significant portion of the total biomass on Earth and are comprised of diverse microbial taxa including bacteria archaea protists and fungi that survive in environments that are often extremely energy limited Due to the unique characteristics of these ecosystems deep subsurface microorganisms are often distinct from those found in surface environments and laboratory strains They are becoming a crucial topic of research for their unusual adaptations to energy limitation and their important interactions with the geosphere Despite its size and significance however the deep biosphere remains largely understudied One of the main gaps in our knowledge is the extent of microbial biogeochemical activity across the physicochemical gradients that characterize deep biosphere extreme ecosystems This is due in large part to the high uncertainty in metabolic rate estimates and unknown systematic biases due to data scarcity Bioenergetic studies have provided a conceptual framework for understanding the complexity of microbial metabolism within various spatial and temporal scales However our knowledge of energy metabolism in the deep biosphere is hindered by inadequate methodology for energy flux quantification and incomplete data of the actual energy parameters associated with subsurface microbes many of which are novel and uncharacterized species Despite these gaps research on the deep biosphere continues to provide new insights into the function of these unique microbial communities and their potential to reach and impact the chemical economy of the overlying ecosystems The aim of this Research Topic is to open a new perspective on the biotic abiotic interface in extreme microbiology We invite contributions from scientists working in diverse disciplines who have a common interest in various aspects of the study of microorganisms that live in energy limited deep subsurface environments This can include research on the diversity activity genetic repertoire and expression of subsurface microbial communities and their resulting biogeochemical activity We encourage the submission of manuscripts focusing on recent advances in deep biosphere studies by using both empirical and theoretical approaches Articles in this Research Topic are dedicated to commemorating the late Jan Amend whose pioneering work significantly advanced our understanding of microbial life in deep subsurface environments Amend's contributions not only challenged existing notions about the limits of life but also provided key insights into the survival strategies of microbes in energy limited settings continuing to inspire and guide current research in extreme microbiology

Cover Crops and Green Manures: Providing Services to Agroecosystems
Walter Daniel Carciochi, Jose Luis Gabriel, Nicolas Wyngaard, 2024-12-17

There is growing interest among farmers, policymakers and society to produce food and fiber in cropping systems that optimize the economic, environmental and social components of sustainability. The inclusion of cover crops in cash crop sequences is an outstanding sustainable management practice due to the multiple ecosystem services they provide. Cover crops promote soil carbon sequestration and this action combined with the effect of roots improves soil's physical and biological properties. The increment in soil organic carbon also enhances soil fertility and thus plant nutrition. Moreover, cover crops interfere in the internal nutrient cycling by acting as catch crops during fallow periods and releasing the nutrients after their termination. The cover crops effect on nutrient cycling affects both nutrient losses and cash crops productivity. All the ecosystem services that cover crops provide are interrelated which complexifies their assessment in agroecosystems. The adoption of cover crops by farmers is still limited and one of the main causes is the restricted information on the benefits that these crops provide to the agroecosystems. One of the main interests is understanding how cover crops impact cash crops productivity and quality which will economically affect the production system. Information on cover crops management e.g. planting and termination date, the proportion of each species in mixtures etc. on cash crops yield is still limited. Also, there is a lack of studies assessing the effect of cover crops on grain quality which could affect grain prices and the quality of human and other animals' diets. Year after year, society demands food produced under sustainable and eco-friendly practices. In this regard, the inclusion of cover crops is an interesting option for organic and agroecological production systems due to their benefits. Studies relating to cash crops productivity and quality with ecosystem services are scarce. As well, analyses of how cover crops management could optimize ecosystem service benefits and minimize trade-offs are required. Lastly, it is necessary to provide scientific background to understand the mechanisms that define changes in the ecosystem services to cover cropping and support farmers' decisions with recommendations on cover crops management to achieve a sustainable agroecosystem. This research topic will accept original articles, reviews and synthesis analysis exploring the inclusion of cover crops in agroecosystems and their relationship with Nutrient cycling, soil fertility and plant nutrition, Soil quality indicators and soil health, Cash crops productivity and quality, Soil biology and biodiversity, Greenhouse gas emissions and carbon sequestration.

Cell and Tissue Destruction
Jurgen Arnhold, 2019-08-13

Cell and Tissue Destruction: Mechanisms, Protection and Disorders provides an overview of the main mechanisms responsible for degradation in human beings and summarizes important strategies to counter these mechanisms. This book details the properties and limits of protective mechanisms along with disturbances to systematic physiological functions. It provides examples of disease states resulting from the limits of protective systems. Three sections consider the physical and chemical reasons for destruction in living systems protection against cytotoxic components and the development of pathologic states This book provides neuroscientists cancer researchers and physicians with robust overall coverage of the interrelated processes involved in cell and tissue destruction in living structures and concomitant protective mechanisms and their limitations Describes the destruction of biological material as a consequence of the highly ordered nature of living structures Specifies the main strategies used by cells to overcome destruction including antioxidative systems self repair and growth Highlights basic mechanisms of immune regulation Considers the development of selected disease scenarios from the perspective of destructive processes in cells and tissues Details organ damage by cytotoxic components as well as septic conditions and multiple organ failure
